TWO DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE BAVARIA.

The Question of Recognition in the British Parliament.

Speech of Earl Russell Against It.

THE MATTER DROPPED.

A Considerable Decline in the Rebel Loan.

Progress of the Polish Revolution.

THE REVOLUTIONISTS NOT YET SUBDUED.

The Conduct of the War Again in the Hands of the National Committees.

The steamship Bavaria, from Southampton on the 25th ult., arrived at this port late last night, with advices from Europe two days later.

The City of New-York arrived March 24.

The Bethiah Thayer, arrived at Nantes from Callao, was boarded by the Alabama, and the master had to sign for $40,000 to obtain his release.

The Miss Nightingale, which arrived on Monday, had on board Capt. COOPER, master of the ship John A. Park, of Halliwell, which the Alabama had destroyed.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

THE QUESTION OF RECOGNITION.

In the House of Lords, Monday, March 23, Lord STRATHEDEN called attention to the question of acknowledging the Southern Confederacy as an independent Power, in connection with other neutral States. Recognition, he contended, would take away the last hope of the North of subjugating the South, and would materially influence the Federal Government in coming to an arrangement with their opponents, if those opponents were once looked on as an independent power by foreign nations. He quoted several precedents for this view, and said that the opinions of this country and of France and Holland had been sufficiently manifested by the recent loan raised for the Confederates, while military men had also expressed their conviction that the conquest of the South was impossible. He concluded by observing that if recognition was withheld, the war would never be brought to an end.

Earl RUSSELL—My Lords, I suppose there is no member of either House of Parliament who does not wish for a termination of the civil war in America. [Hear, hear.] It disturbs commerce, it interferes with the peace of the world, and it afflicts America herself, [hear, hear;] and if anything could be usefully and, I must add, justly done to bring that war to a termination, I repeat there is no member of either House of Parliament, there is no person in the country, who would not gladly see such a consummation. [Hear, hear.] But, after having listened to my noble friend, I must confess I remain in the same persuasion as before at the present moment—and speak only of the present moment—that there is nothing this country could do usefully and wisely which would tend to the termination of the hostilities on the other side of the Atlantic. [Hear, hear.] My noble friend has somewhat mixed different topics, and he has alluded to three different modes of intervention in the affairs of other countries. One, which is the minimum of interference, that of advice, good offices, and mediation; another, the mode proposed by my noble friend, that of recognition; and the third, one which we have sometimes resorted to, and which other nations have more frequently had recourse to—that of forcible intervention. My noble friend says, and says truly, that since I had the honor of addressing the House last Summer there has been some divergence between the views of the Government of this country and that of the Emperor of the French. The Government of the Emperor of the French conceived that it might tend to the termination of the war if three Powers—France, Great Britain and Russia—were to propose a suspension of arms with a view of negotiation between the two belligerents. Her Majesty's Government, after carefully examining that proposition, came to the conclusion that its adoption by us would not be likely to lead to its acceptance by the Government of the United States of America; while, by causing irritation, it would not increase but diminish the chances of our seeing a termination of the contest. The French Government has proceeded in accordance with its views, and has actually proposed to the Government of the United States to negotiate with the Southern States. That proposition has not been adopted; and I think your Lordships will judge from what has happened with reference to the proposals of France, and with reference to suggestions thrown out in other countries, that any interference on the part of this country would only have tended to aggravate the evils of the present lamentable state of affairs in America. [Hear, hear.] It does not appear at the present moment that this contest would be likely to be terminated by an offer of our good offices. I say at the present moment, because it is impossible to say that, in the course of events, a time may not come when both contending parties would be desirous of the good offices or wise counsels of friendly Powers. I do not see any probability of that at this moment, but I wish to guard myself against being supposed to speak positively of the future. [Hear, hear.] We come, then, to the course proposed by my noble friend, namely, that of recognition. My noble friend alluded to several cases—not very happy illustrations of his argument, I think—in which the United States of America have recognized insurgent countries which they believed likely to be able to maintain their independence. One was the revolted State of Hungary, whose independence had sunk like the island in the Mediterranean. It had disappeared before the dispatch reached Vienna by which the United States recognized it. Another instance referred to by my noble friend scarcely comes within the category, though it has been quoted by a gentleman who has written some very able letters under the title of "Historicus"—I mean the recognition of the United States themselves by France two years after the war with this country had begun. If any one will examine that precedent, and the important documents which have lately come to light, he will see that the French monarchy of the day had, most unfortunately for itself, been exciting democratic passions in America, and had been endeavoring to raise opposition there to the Government of Great Britain. If had prepared means of concert with those States; and even in the letter, so courteous in appearance, but so exceedingly hostile and bitter in its spirit, written by the French Ambassador, it was stated that the French Government had not only made a treaty of commerce with the United States, but further, that they had a right to carry that treaty into effect, if necessary, even by force. This was a threat to take part in the war between Great Britain and her revolted colonies. But we know that beside this open threat there was a secret treaty signed, by which France lent her support to the revolted provinces, and the opposition of this country, which was then as decided as ever any opposition was, agreed that the threat was one of war, and that by war only could it be met. This was not a case of recognition, but a case of interference. It was, I think, a most unjustifiable interference—an interference for the purpose of spreading those democratic principles, which afterward reacted on France, and produced so many excesses and crimes during the Revolution. [Hear, hear.] Well, then, with regard to the other cases to which my noble friend has alluded, those of Portugal and Holland, were cases of forcible intervention. There is hardly more than one case in which the question was limited to simple recognition—that was the war carried on between Spain and her revolted colonies, which went on from 1808 to 1822 without any proposal for a recognition. The case is one worthy of the attention of your lordships, because it was illustrated by the mild wisdom of Lord LANSDOWNE, by the profound research of Sir JAMES MCINTOSH, and by the dazzling genius of CANNING. We have, therefore, upon this question of recognition, as much light as can possibly be thrown upon any subject. Now I beg to refer your lordships to the words of Lord LANSDOWNE. He was zealous for the recognition of the South American Provinces, he thought it would be a great advantage to this country to recognize them, and he was entirely free from any trammels of office or any obligations to consult the interests of the Minister of the day. But with that wisdom and forbearance which characterized every act of his public life, [Hear, hear,] he stated that the first thing to be considered was the right, and he went on thus: "It will be my duty this night to point out to your lordships the great advantages which may result from the establishment of South American independence. I hope I shall never stand up in this House to recommend your lordships to adopt any course of policy inconsistent with those principles of right which are paramount to all expediency, and which compose that great law of nations, any departure from which, to answer a selfish and ambitious policy, never fails to recoil upon its authors." [Hear, hear.] These are words upon which this House may well reflect, [hear, hear,] and we may well consider upon what grounds Lord LANSDOWNE founded the views which I have just brought under the notice of your lordships. In the first place, he stated it was necessary that a country which required to be recognized should have established its independence. In the next place, that it should be able to maintain that independence for the future; and, lastly, that it should be able to carry on with all foreign nations those relations of peace and amity which form the general international law of the world. Now, examine the state of the revolted provinces of Spain at that time, as Sir JAMES MACKINTOSH and as Mr. CANNING did. We find that the greater part of South America had been some twelve or fourteen years entirely free from the presence of Spanish armies. We find that, with regard to those provinces in which that was not absolutely the case—namely, Mexico, where Vera Cruz alone was occupied by a Spanish garrison, and Peru, where there were 4,000 or 5,000 Spanish troops—although the cause of Spain seemed hopeless, it was agreed that their recognition should be deferred, and that only in the case of Buenos Ayres, and those parts of South America which had clearly and for a number of years established their independence, would it be right for Great Britain to proceed to the step of recognition. Besides this, Mr. CANNING took care to inform the Spanish Minister that such recognition would not be very long delayed, that if the Spanish Government wished to recognize them, they ought to take that step, and that Great Britain was willing to give time before proceeding to recognize them herself. [Hear.] Well, here is a great precedent for our consideration—here is a step taken by the Government of the day after considerable care and examination; here is a course recommended by the Opposition of the day, not in any harsh spirit, but, notwithstanding the conviction which this country generally entertained that the cause of Spain was hopeless and that the independence of those provinces was firmly established. [Hear.] Well, now, if we look to the present position of North America and compare it with that of the States of which Lord LANSDOWNE spoke, we find that the war in North America is still carried on with the utmost vigor—I had almost said with the utmost fury. We find some of those provinces which were the first to proclaim their independence—a great part of Loisiana, New-Orleans and the banks of the Mississippi occupied by the Federal armies. So that no man can say it is a case of hopeless war. For my own part, and speaking according to my limited vision, I do not believe those efforts of the Federals will be successful.—But no man can say that the war is finally over, or that the independence of the Southern States is established. [Hear, hear.] Well, then, what is the present state of the case? Although great efforts have been made in vain, the great Federal Republic seems unwilling to accept the decision of events. So far from it, we find the last acts of the Congress which has just expired are to place, by conscription, every man fit to carry arms at the disposal of the President of the United States, and to vote sums of money amounting to not less than £180,000,000 sterling for the purpose of carrying on the war. Well, then, in this state of affairs, I should say that, looking to the question of right, it would not be a friendly act towards the United States, it would not be to fulfil our obligations to a country with which we have long maintained relations of peace and amity—a great country which says it can still carry on the war—it would, I say, be a failure of friendship on our part if at this moment we were to interpose and recognize the Southern States. I have endeavored to guard myself by saying that I speak now with reference to the present aspect of affairs. I hardly know any moment in which my noble friend could have brought forward his motion with less encouragement from events. It may turn out that these immense efforts which are being made shall be made in vain; that the spirit of the South is unconquerable as their determination never to be united again with the Northern States is final and irrevocable, and that a time may come when the duty of this country will be totally different from what it is at the present moment. All I maintain is, that it is our duty at present to stand still and not to proceed to an act so definite, so positive—an act so unfriendly to the United States as that of the recognition of the South. [Hear, hear.] My noble friend spoke of various topics—of danger of Canadas being attacked by the Northern Republic, and of the West Indies being attacked by the Southern. My lords, I cannot follow my noble friend into these suppositions. I do not venture to say what may be the future course of events. I confine myself to that which I think to be our duty now—[hear, hear]—which I think is right; and if that be so, we must be content in future days to meet with future dangers, and it will not enfeeble our arms if we have it in our power to reflect that we have never failed in our obligations to those which have been great States in peace and amity with us, and that it has not been through any fault of ours that a great affliction has fallen on them. [Cheers.] Well, my Lords, I know not that there is anything in what my noble friend has said to-night which would make it necessary for me to go much further into this question, but at the same time there were parts of his speech in which he referred to former occasions and former instances of interference on our part, as if my noble friend and some of those who looked forward to his motion to-night, expected that there should be some interference on our part in this war. Now I wish to say only a few words upon that which we have done in former days toward intervention. We, too, like other States, have at times taken upon us to intervene. We interfeared in the case of Holland to save her from the religious tyranny and political despotism of Sir PHILIP II. That contest was hallowed by the blood of Sir PHILIP SYDNEY, and by the part we took contributed to her independence. In another case—the case of Portugal—we interfered. CHARLES I., CROMWELL, CHARLES II., all agreed in that interference. We declared ourselves ready to send 10,000 men to the aid of the new Government of Portugal, and we helped the Portuguese to relieve themselves from the Spanish tyranny under which they groaned, and to establish the independence of their State. In more recent times, when Greece endeavored to establish her independence, we aided her in her contest with Turkey; we rescued her from the destruction which threatened her, and helped her to found a free and independent monarchy. Take the case or Belgium again. When the Belgians declared that they were unable to remain under the Government of Holland, in accordance with the Treaty of Vienna, we interfered by force, in conjunction with France, and the wise and happy arrangement was made by which the freedom of Belgium was secured. Now, my Lords, in all these instances, whether the intervention was carried on by our ancestors or in our own times, there is nothing of which an Englishman need be ashamed. [Hear, hear.] If we have taken part in interventions, it has been in behalf of the independence, freedom and welfare of a great portion of mankind. I should be sorry, indeed, if there should be any intervention on the part of this country which could bear another character. [Cheers.] I trust that this will not be the case, and that no interests, deeply as they may affect us—interests which imply the well-being of a great portion of our people, but interests which may affect also the freedom and happiness of other parts of the globe—will induce us to set an example different from that of our ancestors, but that when we are bound to interfere, it will be an interference in the cause of liberty and to promote the freedom of mankind, as we have hitherto done in such cases. [Hear.] It is with this conviction that I have addressed these few remarks as to what has been done by this country in former days, and I trust that, with regard to this civil war in America, we may be able to continue our impartial and neutral course. Depend upon it, my Lords, that, if that war is to cease, it is far better it should cease by a conviction, both on the part of the North and the South, that they can never live again happily as one community and one republic, and that the termination of hostilities can never be brought about by the advice, the mediation, or the interference of any European Power. [Cheers.] I repeat, I have spoken only of the duty of the Government at the present time, and I trust that there will now be no further debate on this subject. [Loud cheers.]

After a few words from Lord STRATHEDEN, the subject dropped.

A DEFENCE OF JEFF. DAVIS.

From the London Times.

It is satisfactory to find that the friends of the President of the Confederate States are anxious to free him from the charge of having been an advocate of the repudiation which has now been practiced for a quarter of a century by the State of Mississippi, and the following letter addressed by Mr. SLIDELL to a personal correspondent, will command attention:

MY DEAR SIR: I am inclined to think that people in London confound Mr. REUBEN DAVIS, whom I have always understood to have taken the lead on the question of repudiation, with President DAVIS. I am not aware that the latter was ever in any way identified with that question. I am confident that it was not agitated during his canvass for Governor, or during his administration. The Union Bank Bonds were issued in direct violation of an express constitutional provision. There is a wide difference between these bonds and those of the Planter's Bank, for the repudiation of which neither excuse nor palliation can be offered. I feel very confident that JEFFERSON DAVIS never approved or justified that repudiation. What may have been his private opinions of the refusal to consider Mississippi bound to provide for the payment of the Union Bank Bonds I do not know.

JOHN SLIDELL.

THE REBEL LOAN.

The London Times, of the 24th, says:

"The Confederate loan has experienced a slight reaction. It opened at Saturday's price, 4 to 4½ P. M., but closed at 3½ to 4. The allotment letters will be issued in the middle of the week."

And the Times of the 25th:

"The Confederate loan has experienced various fluctuations to-day, and has closed at a further reaction, although there was a partial recovery from the lowest price. The range has been between 3½ and 2 premium, and the final quotation was 2 to 2½ premium."

The Affairs of Poland.

IN THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

In the House of Commons, Monday, March 23, Mr. HANNESSEY called attention to Poland. He wanted to know what the Government were doing in behalf of Poland. He contended that the England had not only a treaty right to interfere in Polish affairs, but she was under a moral obligation to do so.

Lord PALMERSTON said that although this country had a right to interfere, no engagement had been entered into by England in the Treaty of Vienna which imposed upon England the obligation of interfering by force of arms to compel the execution of the treaty:

NAPOLEON COMPLIMENTS M. BILLAULT.

The Moniteur says the Emperor has addressed the following letter to M. BILLAULT:

"I have just read your speech, and, as ever, have been happy to find in you so faithful and so eloquent an intepreter of my policy. You have been able to reconcile the expression of my sympathies for the cause dear to France with the regard due to foreign sovereigns and governments. Your words were on all points in accordance with my meaning. I reject any other interpretation of my sentiments.

NAPOLEON.

INDICATIONS IN THE FRENCH PAPERS.

A telegram from Paris of March 23 says:

"Prince METTERNICH arrived here from Vienna to-day. He had an interview, lasting two hours, with M. DROUYN DE LHUYS, the Minister for Foreign Affairs."

The Pays thinks that France has reason to congratulate herself upon the favorable sentiments of Austria in the negotiations for the settlement of the Polish question.

The Paris correspondent to the Times says:

"A circular from the relief committee of Mulhouse shows that the evil is spreading throughout Alsace, and that 15,000 workingmen swell the list of those who have no wages to depend upon."

THE LATEST TELEGRAMS OF THE WAR.

CRACOW, Friday, March 20.

The following are the details of the battle fought between the Russians and the insurgents, commanded by LANGIEWICZ:

The battle commenced on the 18th, near Zagoscie. The cavalry and wagons of the insurgents were dispersed after a desperate fight. LANGIEWICZ and his Staff disappeared from the field during the engagement, which continued until dark. The Sithemen and Chasseurs wiindrew to Nisiitza. LANGIEWICZ and his friends crossed the Vistula in a small vessel, and gave themselves up to the Austrian hussars, who conducted them to Tarnow.

Dispatches received at the Russian Embassy in Paris confirm the news of the defeat of LANGIEWITZ, who was conveyed to Tamow. The insurgents lost 400 killed and 54 taken prisoners. The news from Posen of the entry of the Russian troops into Posen, is commented upon by the Paris papers.

CRACOW, Saturday, March 21.

After two advantageous engagements on the 17th and 18th, LANGIEWICZ, accompanied by a few officers only, left the camp, leaving the command to another officer. The person supposed to be LANGIEWICZ, who was arrested at the frontier, has been taken to Lemberg. The insurgents, are, apparently, not routed. On the 7th, there was a combat at Jagoscie; on the 18th, at Busko. The victory was with the insurgents. On the 19th there was a skirmish in the forest of Walicki. The Russians were driven out of it.

A dispatch dated March 22, says:

"Nine hundred insurgents have crossed the frontier near Cracow this morning. They are in want of everything, but are not beaten or pursued. LANGIEWICZ is in the Castle of Cracow. The insurgents are imprisoned. The Czar does not think that the disappearance of the Dictator is of much importance. The insurrection continues in other parts."

CRACOW, Saturday, March 21.

The remaining portion of LANGIEWICZ' forces, amounting to 1,000, had another engagement on the 20th, and were defeated and dispersed. Part of them took refuge in Galicia, while the remainder separated into two columns and retreated into the neighboring forests.

Last night 2,000 insurgents were stationed near the Austrian frontier.

Tranquility prevails in Podola and Volhynia.

The peasants are decidedly hostile to the insurrectionary movement.

LEMBERG, Saturday, March 21.

LANGIEWICZ, with several officers of his staff, arrived yesterday in Galicia, and presented to the authorities a French passport bearing a strange name. LANGIEWICZ left, his identity not being discovered, but was afterwards brought by the Austrian hussars to Tarnow. The insurrection in Podolia is increasing. Bands of insurgents are stationed at Bar, Poczajow and Joltuszkow.

The Government Treasury in Krzewnienic has been seized by the national forces.

POSEN, Friday, March 20.

A Russian column has entered Posen, marching through Pieshen, Neustadt, and Vreshen. The column afterward returned to Russian Poland.

A telegram of the 23d says:

"Further divisions of Polish insurgents arrived at Cracow.

A proclamation of the former Central Revolutionary Committee of Warsaw, dated 21st, has been published, announcing that the Committee resumes its fuctions on account of LANGIEWICZ having been taken prisoner. It concludes by making an appeal to the people to take up arms against the enemy. It says: 'When our brothers are perishing in such great numbers, the place of every Pole is in the ranks of the national army.'"

Great Britain.

Tcere have been serious riots at Stalybridge. The Times says:

"The happy confidence which has arisen out of the peaceable behavior of the unemployed operatives in Lancashire has received a shock to the occurrences in Stalybridge. The character of the outbreak has become the more alarming by the renewal of disorder and violence after the apprehension of many rioters and the committal of 29 to the Assizes, and by the apparent inability of the authorities to make their power respected by the mob.

A riot took place at Ashton, but no serious consequences resulted; 13,000 or 14,000 people congregated in the streets. A rumor was afloat that they intended to destroy the gas works and fire the mills. A later dispatch says that the rioters have returned to Staleybridge, and all was quiet.

The Times says:

"The Prince and Princess of Wales are on a visit to Her Majesty at Windsor Castle. On Friday next they leave for Sandringham Hall."

France.

The Moniteur says:

"The news is entirely incorrect that 12,000 men are being concentrated at Toulon in order to be sent to Mexico. The troops expected at Toulon are destined for Algeria."

The Constitutionnel formally contradicts the news of Russian troops having entered Prussian territory.

The Gazette de France has received a warning.

A telegram from Paris of March 24 says. "A debate took place in the Senate upon the bill granting extraordinary credits to the Government. M. FOULD stated: The expenses not foressen by the regular budget has been diminished, and the budget for 1863 has been regulated under comparatively favorable circumstances. According to the experiences in the first two months, the budget of 1863 will afford a surplus of 70,000,000f."

Russia.

A dispatch from St. Petersburgh, of March 23, says:

"An Imperial ukase has been published to-day, abolishing, for certain local reasons, all relations of an obligatory character existing between the peasantry and the landed proprietors in the Governments of Wilna, Grodno and Minsk, and four districts of Witebsk. The emancipation of the peasants is to be completely effected.

The ukase further orders that from May 1 next. the peasants are no longer to pay their rent to the landed proprietors, but to the Government, which will itself pay to the proprietors the price of emancipation.

Full details on this head are contained in the ukase.

The Bulletin, of this city, learns from a passenger just arrived in the steamer Emelie, the following facts in reference to Gen. FOSTER'S position at Little Washington, N. C.:

"One vessel had reached Gen. FOSTER since the rebels had surrounded his camps.

Two of our gunboats, the Hunchback and the Southfield, had, for some days, been stationed just below the rebel battery and had kept the rebels busy in replying to their shots.

As the Emelie left Newbern, two Union gunboats had arrived and were about starting up to the relief of Gen. FOSTER.

Land reinforcements were also on their way to relieve Gen. FOSTER, but none had reached Little Washington at last advices.

It was the opinion of our informant that Gen. FOSTER could hold out some seven or eight days from the date of the sailing of the Emelie, as communication, by means of small boats, had been had with him during the seige. The situation of Gen. FOSTER was, however, critical, and everything depended on succor reaching him quickly, as the rebel force was very heavy."

THE LATEST REBEL REPORTS.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 10.

The rebel pickets on the Rappahannock last night hailed our men with an exclamation that Charleston had been captured by the Yankees; but to-day sung out, "You Yankees have been repulsed, with the loss of several of your iron-clads." The wind, which was blowing very hard at the time from the northwest, prevented or rendered unintelligible further conversation.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Rebel Prisoners for Exchange—An Expedition to Mobjack Bay, &c.

FORTRESS MONROE, Thursday, April 9.

The flag-of-truce boat Robert Morris, in charge of Capt. BISBEE, of the Ninth Vermont, left this morning for City Point, with about 500 rebel prisoners. Also the Nelly Pentz, with nearly the same number.

The Ninth Vermont regiment have arrived here and are in camp.

Dr. HUNTINGTON, Assistant Surgeon United States Army, and for some time past in charge of the post hospital here, has been ordered to report to Gen ROSECRANS. The men under his charge while here, have presented him with a valuable set of silver goblets and a field-glass.

An expedition left Yorktown last Tuesday for Mobjack Bay, and ran up Ware River, where they remained that day, took two contrabands, and next day proceeded up North River, where they found two planters, who took the oath. About thirty secesh cavalry made their appearance from the woods, but on seeing the gunboat which accompanied the expedition they ran away in hot haste. The expedition here captured twelve contrabands and four very fine horses, and returned to Yorktown yesterday afternoon, having seen no considerable bodies of rebel troops.

Gen. DIX being absent from this department, Gen. KEYES visited this place to-day, and returned to Yorktown at a late hour this afternoon.

THE REBEL CAMPAIGN COMMENCED.

A correspondent of the Richmond Sentinel, writing from "Army Headquarters, near Ivor's Station, Norfolk and Petersburgh Railroad, April 2," says:

"The ball has not opened yet, but the performers have all taken their places on the floor, the bands are tuning their instruments, and a few moments will find everything in motion. Baggage, already of its minimum, is to be yet reduced; furloughs are revoked; inspections are the order of the day, and the 1st of April may be considered the beginning of the campaign of 1863. The following extract from an order will show that work is intended:

'It will be necessary to reduce the transportation of the army to the lowest limit. * * * The Commanding-General regrets curtailing the comforts of an army which has evinced so much self-denial in the endurance of privation, but feels satisfied that ready acquiescence will be shown in all measures tending to secure success, and the more speedy conclusion of the war and appeals to officers and men, &c.'"

From San Francisco.

A PROCLAMATION FROM GEN. WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Thursday, April 9.

Gen. WRIGHT has issued a proclamation, which concludes as follows:

"Although the great mass of people on the Pacific coast are eminently patriotic and devoted to the Union, yet, fellow-citizens, we must not disguise the fact that we have traitors in our midst, who are doing all in their power to involve this country in the horrors of civil war; to such persons, I say, pause and reflect well before plunging into the yawning abyss of treason. An indignant people will rise in their majesty, and swift retributive justice will be their certain doom."

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

A Tragic Affair in the Bowery.

A SOLDIER ATTEMPTS TO MURDER A WOMAN, AND COMMITS SUICIDE BY MEANS OF POISON.

Coroner WILDEY was called upon to hold an inquest yesterday, at the public house of EMANUEL ALBRECHT, No. 29 Bowery, upon the body of CHARLES FREDERICK NOLL, a soldier, who died on Thursday night at that place, from the effects of poison, administered by himself. The deceased was a member of the Eighth regiment, N. Y. S. V., and, as it is said, had been home on a furlough, which expired on the 1st inst. What adds to the tragic interest of the case is the fact that, while putting an end to his own life, he also made a desperate attempt to take the life of a Miss MARY STRUBE, to whom he was engaged to be married. He not only administered poison to her without her knowledge, but when he saw that he could not murder her in that way, he tried to choke her to death, and actually died while exerting himself to strangle her. The latter, however, had so far recovered, yesterday, as to be able to give her testimony upon the inquest, the substance of which we give below. The deceased, it seems, was haunted with the idea that, inasmuch as he had overstaid his time, he would be treated as a deserter, if caught. He expressed the fear that he would be shot, and he could not leave his intended to mourn over his untimely end. The following is her testimony:

Mary Strube, the principal witness in the case, testified that she lived at No. 25 Bowery; that she had known the deceased about one year; he had kept company with her during that time; he was a soldier, and was home on a furlough, which expired on the 30th of March last; during the past few days he was under the impression that if he was caught he would be shot as a deserter; witness went to the hotel with him on Thursday last, and it was there that he gave her poison; when witness told deceased that she was thirsty, he said he would fix her a drink that would make her sing; he then went down stairs and brought her some [illegible] which she drank; he then told witness that she was poisoned; witness began to cry; deceased told her not to hush up he would smother her; the d[illegible] brought two glasses of mixture, and after giving witness one he drank the other himself; he then said the glasses contained poison; he said he was determined to kill himself, and he did not wish witness to live after he was dead; he gave that as a reason for poisoning witness. The latter further stated that she soon began to grow so weak that she could not stand, and when she lay down, she was so weak and faint she could not get up; about this time the deceased went out for more poison and locked witness in the room; when he returned, he brought witness something in a glass, which he said was from the bar, and would make her well; witness took a small portion of it, but it made her feel worse; severe pains then began to attack the deceased, and for a short time he seemed to be in great agony; he asked witness if she did not feel in pain also; soon after deceased told her he was going to die; he then tried to choke witness, at the same time saying she must die with him; he was so weak, however, at this time that he could not do her much harm; while he was engaged in choking witness, he fell back exhausted and died in a few minutes afterward; witness at this time was so weak that she was unable to rise from the bed, and was compelled to lie there until the porter came and looked at the door, some time during Thursday evening; witness was then removed to another room, and attended by a physician; the first poison which witness took she could retain, the deceased kept down all that he took; after witness took the second dose, the deceased told her he had left a letter down stairs, in which he stated that he was about to kill himself and witness, and that he wanted both to be buried in one grave; the father of deceased lives at No. 151 Wooster-street.

Emanuel Albrecht testified that he kept the house No. 29 Bowery; deceased hired a room of him on Thursday, saying that he would stay for a day or two, as he was about to marry Miss Strube, and should leave with her for Philadelphia on Saturday; witness last saw him alive in the bar-room about nine o'clock P. M.

The druggist who sold the poison to the deceased was examined, and testified that he first sold deceased half an ounce of laudanum. The latter stated that he was to be applied to the wound of a fellow soldier; this was on Tuesday evening; on Wednesday evening he came again to the drug-store and said he had made a mistake; that it was opium and not laudanum that he wanted. Witness accordingly sold him two drachms of opium.

Dr. Bruton, who made the post-mortem, testified that he found opium in its crude state in the stomach of the deceased, and, from all the testimony in the case, the Doctor had no doubt that death was caused by opium taken by the deceased with a suicidal intent.

The Jury rendered a verdict of death by suicide from opium. The deceased was about 29 years of age, and a native of Germany.

Visit of the Indians to Public School No. 14.

The Indian chiefs and squaws which are now exhibiting at the Museum, visited yesterday morning Public School No. 14, on Twenty-seventh-street, near Third-avenue. They were accompanied by Mr. BARNUM, and by Mr. SMITH, who acts as interpreter. They were conveyed to the school in an omnibus drawn by six horses, which was preceded by a vehicle containing a band of musicians. Their appearance on Broadway and other streets through which they passed excited great attention, and by the time the building was reached, a large concourse of people began to assemble in the vicinity. Mr. B. B. ATTENBURY, a Trustee of the school, was in waiting to conduct the party through the various departments. The primary room was first visited. The Indians appeared highly pleased at the calisthenic exercises performed by the children, and listened attentively to some delightful singing, although, of course, the words were unintelligible to them. "War Bonnet," upon being invited to speak, declined, for the reason that everything was new to him, and he could say nothing which would be satisfactory to those present. Before taking leave they stood up in line, while Mr. SMITH designated each one by his and her name, and the tribe to which they belonged, and also intimated their dispositions, giving "Yellow Buffalo" the credit of being the best Indian in the delegation, and "Little Heart" the discredit of being the worst one. They were then shown to the female department of the grammar school, and lastly, to the boy's department. While in the latter room, they were addressed in a neat and exceedingly appropriate speech by THOMAS ECCLESINE, one of the pupils. Master THOMAS had but one hour to compose the address and commit it to memory. A large number of spectators were present, and, in common with the pupils, were much interested at the sight of the wild men of the forest. The unique party remained about an hour, and were then conducted to the omnibus and driven down Broadway.

United States Marshal's Office.

ARRIVAL OF REBEL PRIZE OFFICERS AND THE CREW OF THE RECAPTURED BARK ELLICOTT.

The bark J. P. Ellicott, of Boston, laden with stores, was captured near St. Thomas, by the rebel schooner Retribution, on the 10th of January last. A prize crew of five, and two prize officers, named JOHN GILBERT and GILBERT HAYES, were put on board. Soon afterward the crew took charge of the vessel, put the officers in confinement, and returned the vessel to the American Consul at St. Thomas. The Consul sent the officers and crew to the United States Marshal in this City, and they arrived yesterday. The officers were held for examination, and the crew are detained as witnesses. The crew of the prize ship Peterhoff, captured while attempting to run the blockade, arrived at the Marshal's office yesterday, and were detained as witnesses in that case.

LAW REPORTS.

Police Duties, Trials and Penalties—Deduction by Fine from Pay of Policemen.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Justice Peckham.

The People ex rel. Cook vs. The Board of Police.—This was a certiorari to review the judgment of the Board of Police, deducting by fine the pay of the relator as a member of the Police force, from the 26th day of October, 1861, to the 8th day of January, 1863.

It appeared by the return to the certiorari, that on the 19th day of January, 1863, the Superintendent of Police, John A. Kennedy, preferred to the Board charges against Cook of "neglect of duty," and specified as the ground of such neglect that "Cook was absent from duty and from the Station-house of the Ninth Precinct from Oct. 25, 1861, to the 8th day of anuary, 1863."

It also appeared from the return that the relator had been removed from the Police force by the judgment of the Board in the Fall of 1861, and just prior to the alleged absence; that the judgment of removal continued in force till just before the preferring of the present charge, till the order of removal was reversed by this Court, and Cook returned to his prior position on the force.

PECKHAM, J.—The substance of this charge, then, is, that the relator has been guilty of dereliction of duty in not serving as a member of the force while and after the Board had turned him out, and of this he is actually convicted under charge, and his pay deducted while so absent—absent by express order of the Board—not by permission or leave; not by his selection or volition, but by the express order and direction of the Board.

The Court then stated its opinion to be, that it was a wholly immaterial question whether or not the relator reported himself for duty after his removal—he had repeatedly applied to the Board to be reinstated, prior to taking steps to set aside the order of the Board, and had been refused; he had not been in any regular business since October, 1861, and had been ready and anxious to resume his position and do his duty in the Department up to the time of his restoration.

It was shocking to one's sense of justice that the Board should impose a fine for not doing what it had ordered the relator not to do—not to act as a member of the force.

If the relator had been engaged at any time in any other business, and any deduction ought therefore to have been made. The question should have been left to be settled by a proper action in the Courts, if the Board and the relator did not agree.

The forms of criminal proceeding should never have been resorted to for any such purpose, though they may be entirely effectual therefor.

There could be no relief on the merits, as the return to a common law certiorari does not properly embrace the evidence.

But the return showed that at the time this fine was imposed, the law had been altered. When the charge was made a rule of the Board provided that absence, with or without leave, except in a certain case, forfeited pay. It did not appear but that this absence was under the excepted case.

The rule was altered after commencement of trial, but before judgment, so as to allow a fine to be imposed only when the person charged was absent without leave. The relator was not charged with being absent without leave, nor was he convicted of any such charge. There was, then, no law when the charge was made, or when the judgment was pronounced, to uphold it.

Proceedings of the Board reversed.

Wm. H. Arnoux for relator; Aaron J. Vanderpoel for the Board.

Alleged Assault Upon a Constable, and a Counter Allegation of Extortion.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Daly.

Springsteen vs. Pickhardt and Wife.—This was an action brought by the plaintiff, a constable, to recover of the defendant for an alleged assault.

The complainant alleged that on the 25th of February, 1862, he called at the defendants' furniture store to collect a $10 execution against Mr. Pickhardt, when he was violently assaulted, kicked, beaten, &c., by the defendant, to his damage $2,000.

The defence was a denial of the charge, and the allegations that the plaintiff having called on a former occasion, was informed that the case was settled; that the plaintiff replied he knew nothing about that; that defendant wished to see counsel, and asked until the next day—when he had not yet seen his lawyer—but the plaintiff demanded his fees, $3, which were paid and he left; that on the 25th he came again, accompanied by others, and saw Mrs. Pickhardt, her husband being in the shop at the time; that the plaintiff began to remove property; Mrs. Pickhardt, not knowing their business, and supposing them to be lawless persons, interfered, at the same time making outcries to her husband; that Mrs. Pickhardt was violently seized and maltreated; that Mr. Pickhardt then came down and remonstrated with the plaintiff, but did no act to interfere. It was claimed that the defendants then paid the plaintiff $13 50, and regained possession of their property, thus paying $6 50 fees upon an execution of $10.

The trial resulted in a verdict for defendants.

W. C. Carpenter for plaintiff; C. D. Miller for defendants.

How Soon is "As Soon as Possible?"—A Witness in the Army of Virginia.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Robertson.

James M. Brownson vs. The Humboldt Fire Insurance Company.—This was an action upon a policy of insurance for $2,500 issued by the defendant upon the plaintiff's stock of printing presses, &c., at No. 45 Fulton-street.

The case was stated in the TIMES of yesterday.

As the Court required the plaintiff to excuse the apparent delay in not serving the preliminary proofs of loss within the time considered by the Court "as soon as possible," as required by the policy, and as a material witness on that point was absent in the Virginia army, the plaintiff withdrew a juror, and the case went off for the term.

The price of Gold Coin fluctuated violently to-day between 146¼ and 150 ₰ cent., the excitement on the Street being much increased by the news from Charleston through the Richmond papers. The few unfavorable points in the news were seized upon, of course, to advance the price, while the inconclusive nature of the bombardment, as thus far known, induced sellers in the afternoon to pause for further news. The Assembly at Albany will also note that rumors of a disagreement between the two Houses on the Restraining bill, and the possibility, thereby, of its defeat, were used to favor the speculation for higher premiums. The relative rates of Exchange on London for Saturday's mail ruled decidedly below the price of Gold; sales of first-class bills being made at 162 ₰ cent., and the market closing dull at 162@164 ₰ cent. The export demand for Gold is consequently very light. There is decided ease in the Money market, particularly to the Stock Brokers on call at 5@6 ₰ cent. The conversions of United States Notes into the New Loan of 1882, through the Sub-Treasury, direct amount to-day to $275,000, in addition to $575,000 reported for account of the Loan Agent. The deposits on 5 ₰ cent. interest are $440,000.

The Share Market was less strong in the forenoon than at the close of business last night on several descriptions, though higher on Harlem and Pacific Mail. In the afternoon the changes were not important, and the business comparatively moderate. The Government Stocks and Treasury paper continued steady in price, but less active than early in the week. At 4 o'clock the following prices were made as compared with the closing last evening, the market generally steady:

The Assembly Restraining bill, (Judge DEAN'S) on the matter of Bank Loans upon Gold, passed the State Senate yesterday by the large vote of 24 Yeas to 4 Nays. It was amended in the Senate by incorporating the main provisions of Mr. CONNOLLY'S proposition, and now returns to the Assembly for concurrence. In its present shape, we think the bill reaches the abuse complained of more directly than the original draft of Judge DEAN, though this does not detract from the high credit due to the Judge for his prompt and efficient action in the Assembly. We hope the amendment will meet his approval as well as the concurrence of the House. The intimation through one of the morning papers that the law may prove damaging or inconvenient to our Importing Merchants, besides directing the business of lending on gold to the neighboring cities, has no license, we believe, in any serious division of opinion on the subject, among any class of our Merchants, least of all, the Importers, who would like to have the premium on Gold as steady as the relative supply from the interior and the export demaud for Europe would authorize, without the disturbing element of speculation fostered by loans at Bank on both Gold and Exchange. But aside from this mercantile view, the duty of the Legislature should, as we doubt not it will be, directed to the higher consideration of restraining the moneyed corporations of its own creation from facilitating the mischievous efforts of speculation to depreciate the National Paper Currency; since upon this the credit of the State itself, and the whole movement of its Banks, is made to rest, for the indefinite period of the War. The law will take nothing from the legitimate functions of our Banks as Money lenders, nor interpose the slightest obstacle to the regular business of the Money and Bullion Brokers. It is only where one or all of these classes turn speculators against the public credit, aiming to buy, at exaggerated premiums, millions of Gold where their ability to hold it at par is really measured by tens or hundreds of thousands, that the law steps in and says this cannot or shall not be done through the Banks of New-York—at least until they return to Specie payments themselves.

Mr. WILLIAM E. HICKS, for many years the Money and Stock Exchange reporter for the Evening Post, has resigned his position on that paper, and sails for Europe with his family, on the City of Washington, to-morrow, to be absent for a year or two.

The statements of the Banks of the three principal cities of the Union for the last week compare with the previous one, and the corresponding time of 1862, as follows:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The only news we have from Charleston, this morning, is rebel news, and it must consequently be received with all due allowance. The Richmond Whig of Thursday contains a telegram from Charleston, dated the 7th, which states that the naval attack commenced on that day, four iron-clads being first engaged, and the attack being directed against Fort Sumter. The firing from the fleet, and from Forts Sumter and Moultrie, and from the Morris Island batteries, is represented to have been very heavy. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon all the Monitors, nine in number, and the Ironsides, were engaged, at a distance of three thousand yards from Sumter. The firing was kept up incessantly until 5 o'clock, when it gradually diminished—the Ironsides and Keokuk having withdrawn an hour previously, apparently disabled. Another dispatch, dated the 8th, states that seven Monitors and the Ironsides were then inside the bar, though the conflict had not been renewed. The Keokuk was said to be sunk on the beach off Morris Island. One boy killed and five men badly wounded, are said to be the casualties in Fort Sumter.

The steamer Emilie arrived at Philadelphia yesterday from Newbern, bringing some additional intelligence regarding the position of Gen. Foster at Little Washington, N. C. Since the rebels had invested the place, one vessel had reached him, having succeeded in running the rebel blockade of the Pamlico. The two gunboats Hunchback and Southfield were still below the rebel battery, and kept it busy in replying to their shots. Two additional gunboats were leaving Newbern as the Emilie sailed, and would probably try to run past this battery and join Gen. Foster. Land reinforcements were also on their way. It was believed that the General could hold out for seven or eight days, even if succor should not reach him. There are eight companies of the Twenty-seventh Massachusetts, eight of the Forty-eighth Massachusetts, and some loyal North Carolinians—about 1,800 men in all—with him in Washington. A letter states that thirty-six pieces of artillery had arrived at Newbern from Fortress Monroe, but it does not appear that any reinforcement of troops accompanied them.

Rebel reports from the Mississippi are to the 7th inst. A dispatch dated Vicksburgh states that the National forces were withdrawing from the Peninsula opposite, and that the levee had been cut, allowing the water to overflow the old camping ground. A dispatch from Jackson states that Admiral Farragut, with his three vessels—the Hartford, Albatross and ram Switzerland—was above Port Hudson. He had signaled the lower fleet, but apparently had no intention of going down past the batteries. The Hartford landed at Bayou Sara on the morning of the 7th, and destroyed some stores there belonging to the rebel Government. The rebels expected an attack on Vicksburgh within the week.

A letter dated at Baton Rouge, March 27, announces the departure of Gen. Grover's division for the Atchafalaya country. Gen. Emery's division was also under marching orders, so that Gen. Augur's forces were to be left in sole possession at Baton Rouge.

Col. Bissell's Engineer corps has arrived at Memphis, and it is said that it will immediately commence the repair of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad. This looks as if the siege of Vicksburgh, as it is at present prosecuted, was to be abandoned.

By the steamship Bavaria which arrived at this port last night, we have advices from Europe two days later. She left Southampton on the 25th ult. The question of recognition had come up in the British Parliament, and Earl Russell had made a very strong speech against it. The Liverpool cotton market was steady. The Rebel Cotton Loan was declining.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, a large number of bills were reported favorably—among them, one providing for the recording of stamps of the United States interest revenue; one confirming ordinances of the New-York Common Council; one relative to licenses in New-York; the Brooklyn Tunnel Assessment bill, and the bills incorporating the Soldiers' Home and the Soldiers' Rest. The Annual Appropriation bill was passed.

In the Assembly, the Excise law was recommitted, with instructions to strike out certain sections. The Broadway Railroad bill came from the Senate, and was referred to the Railroad Committee. The bill establishing and regulating the New-York and Staten Island ferries was reported complete. Nothing of importance was done during the evening session.

GENERAL NEWS.

Coroner Wildey held an inquest yesterday, at No. 29 Bowery, upon the body of Charles F. Noll, a soldier of the Eighth New-York Volunteers, who came to his death by means of poison administered by himself, with intent to commit suicide. He also tried to murder a young woman, named Mary Struhe, to whom he was engaged to be married, by administering to her poison without her knowledge. Failing in this, he tried to end her existence by strangulation, but did not succeed.

It is stated that an important change has recently taken place in the channel of the Hudson River below Castleton. One of the lateral channels entering the main channel from the east, below Barren Island, through which the water flowed freely during the Winter, has caused a bad shoal to be formed where it enters the main channel, and where there was twelve feet of water last season. The main channel appears to have been diverted across to the west shore, above Newburgh, and taken the same course as was followed by the steamboats twenty years ago.

The body of a young man, whose name is supposed to be A. H. Eaton, was found in the streets of Rochester on Thursday morning. A ball, apparently fired from a pistol which the young man himself discharged, had passed directly through his heart. No clue has yet been discovered to the cause of the suicide.

The price of Gold Coin fluctuated between 140¼ @150 yesterday, leaving off 149¼. Stocks closed steady. Exchange on London, 162@164. Money easy. The conversions of Currency into the New Loan of 1882 were $850,000.

The principal kinds of Breadstuffs were in more demand, yesterday, but at essentially unchanged prices. Provisions were heavy and drooping. Hay, Rice, Firecrackers and Rio Coffee, were in good demand. Sugars, Molasses, Fruit, Metals, Oils, Seeds, Tobacco, and Naval Stores, were very quiet. Cotton was dull and unsettled. The Freight market was somewhat brisker.

Progress of War Sentiment Among the Copperheads.

The country has at last, after a great deal of trouble and difficulty, got at the precise nature of the objects which the Copperhead party has in view; and we trust that, as everybody now understands everybody else, we can give our undivided attention to the work of the war. Before the New-York election, as well as we could make out, they wanted peace, somehow or anyhow. As the canvass progressed, and they begun, after feeling the public pulse, to want war a little—but only a little—and it was to be a genteel and "fraternal" war, carried on a la McClellan—we were not to forget that the Southerners were still our brethren, and though a painful necessity might compel us to fight them, we were to kill and wound them in the way which brothers who have differences usually kill and wound one another—whatever that may be. We were to fire low, so as only to hit their legs, and were not even to attempt that without previously firing in the air, or with blank cartridge, so as to see whether they would not disperse and take the oath of allegiance before beginning an action. And even this species of modified conflict was not to be carried on beyond the capture of Richmond. Our army was to go down there, and having carefully taken the rebel forces prisoners, and tied their hands behind their backs with pocket-handkerchiefs, we were to read the Declaration of Independence from the steps of the State-house, and then acknowledge the independence of the Southern Confederacy and come home.

After they had achieved their victory in New-York, symptoms of the peace mania began to return, and we were again thrown into a state of uncertainty as to their intentions. The "olive branch," of which we have heard a great deal ever since the beginning of the war, and which we had been frequently informed every warrior ought to carry in his left hand, if he carried the sword in his right, no matter how much it might impede his movements, or obstruct his sight, was brought out from the obscurity to which the bloodthirsty Republicans had consigned it, and carried in procession with a good deal of chanting and glorification. After the public had satisfied itself by gaping at it, sprigs of it were politely offered to the chiefs of the Confederacy by the Democratic leaders. What effect the sight of it produced on the Southern mind will probably never be known, as we believe, in spite of Fernando Wood's assertion to the contrary, that no Southerner of position or character ever formally communicated his opinions about either its appearance or its virtues to anybody at the North. What we do know is that about this time there was a decided increase both in volume and rapidity in the stream of vituperation which flows perennially from the Southern press and stump, against everybody and everything at the North. From barbarians, robbers, ruffians, and common felons, we sunk down into "hyenas." We had previously been considered worthy of being negotiated with on equal terms; but we were now informed that it was considered impossible even to trade with us without a preliminary stopping up of the nose. In fact, there is every reason to believe, judging from the experience of the Copperheads, that whatever may have been the position of the olive in ancient times, it is no longer the emblem of peace, and that the display of it in our day is considered indicative of more than ordinary servility and rascality.

After this there was a slight effort made to turn New-England "out in the cold;" and we had lectures from all sides on "witch-burning," "Quaker-whipping," "self-restraint," and we were promised a glorious and happy career, as soon as we had got rid of the Puritans. But whether we were to get rid of them after the war was over, or during the war, or in what manner, nobody vouchsafed to say; and though we were assured that it was the harangues of New-England preachers and the diatribes of New-England newspapers that had brought on the rebellion, it was never clearly stated whether there was any good reason for supposing that they would be more silent about disagreeable or dangerous topics when foreigners than they have been as natives.

The reverses in New-Hampshire and Rhode Island, but above all in Connecticut, have, however, at last removed all doubt as to Copperhead wishes and aims. The trumpet has at last lost its uncertain sound, and whatever their real wishes may be, there is no longer any doubt about the meaning of their language. The "olive branch" has been relegated to its shrine in the sanctum of Mozart Hall; the Union is not to be remodeled either by leaving out the New-England States or any other States; the war is to be continued not only until Richmond is taken, but "until the rebels have laid down their arms." These sage conclusions, it is true, have not been reached without six months or more of most mischievous agitation, which has seriously embarrassed us at home, and seriously injured us abroad—but it has been reached, so let us be content. The malignants have at last satisfied themselves that there is not a single State in the North in which their dishonorable peace, or peaceable war schemes—find any favor. They have, therefore, at last, formally proclaimed their intention to confine themselves to constitutional opposition to the Conscription act and to arbitrary arrests. At this little game we are content to have them play as long as they please. And they have the consolation of knowing that they can carry it on to their hearts' content, without having a majority in any loyal State. The Courts are open to them, and to any comfort or aid they can get in them, they are heartily welcome. But we are not willing to be ruined or dishonored in order to please them.

The Confederate Loan—Purchase of Cotton by Neutrals.

The fact that a Confederate loan, to the amount of fifteen millions of dollars, has just been subscribed in Europe; that largely more offerings were made than would cover the amount asked for; and that the loan was taken at a premium, entitles the matter to graver attention than it has received in the United States. The Confederate loan is secured by the hypothecation of cotton. And the London Times, in chronicling the progress and success of the loan, which had no official authorization by foreign Governments, spoke of it as exclusively a "cotton speculation."

This is doubtless the correct view. We are not prepared to believe that intelligent capitalists in Europe are ready to pay a premium for the privilege of becoming creditors of the Confederate Government. In the first place, no such Government is known among nations. In the next place, if known, it would be remembered as a Government presided over by a repudiator, and composed of such faithless, repudiating States, as Arkansas and Mississippi. In the last place, if the Confederacy were an acknowledged and independent nation, and honest in its purposes, it would emerge from the war wholly bankrupt in means and credit, and its loans would not be sought for as favorite investments by any people. We must take the statement of the London Times as true, that the Confederate loan is successful merely as a "cotton speculation," and in this aspect we must look at the meaning and tendency of the transaction.

Why should English and French capitalists be so ready to risk their money on cotton now in Confederate hands and within the blockading lines of the United States? It must be because they expect their Governments to protect them, as neutrals, in the possession of their property, so that whether by a forcible raising of the blockade or by awaiting patiently the close of the war, they may get their cotton and realize large profits on it. A recurrence to the communications that took place between Lord Lyons and Secretary Seward, so long ago as last December, (published in the Times of the 1st of April,) will satisfy any one, we think, that even then the British Minister, whether consciously or not we will not say, was preparing the way for this very Confederate loan. In a letter to Earl Russell dated the 19th of December, Lord Lyons mentions the arrival in Washington of Mr. Moore, her Majesty's Consul at Richmond. The sole object of Mr. Moore's visit to Washington was thus exposed in Lord Lyons' letter:

"From the information which he gave me, it appeared evident that a very great desire existed on the part both of the so-called Confederate Government, and of private persons in the South, to make large sales of cotton to neutral purchasers, and that the Confederate authorities were prepared to guarantee the safe transport of neutral cotton till it had passed beyond their own military lines."

Lord Lyons says that he went to Mr. Seward and told him of these tempting offers of the Confederates to foreign cotton buyers, and desired to know whether "cotton sold to neutrals" would be taken possession of by United States officers. Mr. Seward's reply was not very satisfactory. The policy of the Administration was not fixed, and he desired to evade an immediate reply, so he contented himself with recapitulating the concessions that had been made in behalf of neutral cotton buyers.

Lord Lyons said he had made objection to Mr. Seward's concessions in behalf of neutrals that they were "not recorded in official documents." But to clear up the matter for the future, he said he put the following question point blank, to Mr. Seward:

"Was there any formal declaration that neutral cotton would be respected, so clear as to be calculated to remove all doubt from the minds of neutral buyers, as well as Confederate sellers?"

To which, he says, Mr. Seward returned the following unequivocal answer:

"Mr. Seward observed, with regard to the first question, that neutral property was guaranteed by assurances given over and over again by this Government."

This was a great point gained for the "neutral" cotton buyers of England, but it was oral, not written. Lord Lyons communicated the result to Earl Russell, and said he should try to obtain Mr. Seward's assurance in writing to the same effect. Accordingly he addresses Mr. Seward a note, in which he asks explicitly:

"Is the Government of the United States willing to give an assurance, in a distinct and positive shape, that its officers will, without reservation, respect cotton, the property of neutrals?

From my conversations with you, I understand that this Government will not interfere with cotton which is (or which shall become) the property of neutrals, nor deprive its owners of the control of it, even in cases in which it would take military possession of cotton, the property of loyal citizens. Neutrals will (if I have not mistaken you) be allowed to avail themselves of any facilities for exportation which are or which may be afforded to loyal citizens, but will not be deprived of their free choice in the matter. Will the Government of the United States record this in a regular official document?

I should have mentioned this matter to you orally had I not been afraid of making some mistake in a matter which may involve so seriously the interests of British merchants. The communication being private, no inconvenience can arise from its being in writing. I shall be very grateful for an early answer."

We hardly understand the next to the last sentence above. How is any note of a Minister "private," in a sense to render its answer inwriting "not inconvenient?" Lord Lyons sent a copy of this note to Earl Russell; it was official and not private, and the answer would have gone to England. Was the object to throw Mr. Seward off his guard, and obtain an incautious admission that might be taken advantage of?

If there was any such thought, it failed, for Mr. Seward did not reply in writing to Lord Lyons' note. After waiting ten days, the impatient Minister sought our Secretary and renewed his solicitations for an answer in writing. But now Mr. Seward was further off than ever from making written concessions in behalf of neutrals, and told Lord Lyons that the United States Government proposed to adopt "new regulations," in virtue of which cotton was to be taken possession of by Government officers and sent to Northern markets, and that no other mode of exportation would be allowed. There the matter was allowed to drop.

It will be seen that in all this correspondence no interdiction against the purchase of cotton from the Confederates, by merchants of neutral nations, appears. Mr. Seward repeatedly admits their right to buy, and the readiness of the United States Government to respect their possession of the cotton when bought. Even the new law, under which the "new regulations" for taking possession of all cotton are formed, does not propose to ignore or disregard the rights of neutrals when laying claim to cotton. So that, for all that appears in the laws or usages of the United States Government, or the avowals of our Secretary of State to the contrary, there is no invalidity in the security offered for the Confederate loan. English purchasers of Confederate cotton obtain a perfect right to it as neutrals, and may lawfully demand reparation of the United States, through their Government, if we destroy a pound of it.

In view of the startling success of the Confederate loan, and the fatal complications the sale of Confederate cotton to neutrals may lead to, it appears to us plain that the Government at Washington should at once change its policy, and warn all citizens of foreign States against purchasing cotton or other property in the South, which is already forfeited by its present pretended owners for treason, and will be taken and confiscated by the Government as fast as it shall be reached by our armies. Of what value to us is the blockade if we allow the Confederates to make lawful sale of millions of dollars worth of property within our lines? And by what right shall we resist the exportation of cotton from the South, if we admit it to be clearly the property of neutrals?

The Loyal Meeting To-Day.

A grand mass meeting is to be held this afternoon on Union-square, to reaffirm the determination of loyal men everywhere to prosecute the war until the rebellion is extinguished. The day is the anniversary of the attack upon Fort Sumter—the event which first aroused the country to the conviction that the rebellion was a reality, and not merely an empty threat. Distinguished speakers will be present, and arrangements have been made which will render the gathering one of the largest and most influential of the day.

The Fight in Charleston Harbor.

Every reader will turn with profound interest to the brief details we are enabled to give of the fight going on in Charleston harbor. Such facts as we have are obtained from rebel sources, and are to be taken with grains of allowance. But there is nothing even in what the rebels tell us that is calculated to create any uneasiness as to the hoped-for result. There is, on the contrary, encouragement in this, that the rebel authorities admit our powerful iron-clad fleet to be inside of Charleston bar, in easy range of Fort Sumter, and consequently that it has escaped the attacks of batteries lower down the harbor, placed there to embarrass the approach, and has also escaped, for the present, the torpedoes and submarine enemies that were expected to be so disastrous.

The conclusion of the rebel leaders that because the Keokuk and Ironsides withdrew from the engagement with Fort Sumter about 4 o'clock, they were disabled, may not be warranted by facts. There might be other reasons to account for the manœuvre. The work in hand affords opportunity for deliberation; and inasmuch as, according to rebel authority, eight iron-clads remained in range to keep Fort Sumter busy, the lack of the two, for a brief season, would hardly be observed. It may be, indeed, a part of the policy of Commodore Dupont to rest part of his ships while the others keep up the fire, so that no cessation of the cannonade may take place. In this way the garrison in the fort may be more rapidly exhausted, as happened in Gen. Anderson's case.

The rebels admit casualties in Fort Sumter—one boy killed and five men badly wounded. This is worse than happened to Gen. Anderson when he defended Fort Sumter against the rebel fire. He lost not a man. This is evidence that the iron-clads are pouring a sure fire into the casemated fort; and the fact that the rebel dispatches say not one word of cheer or congratulation over the manner of Sumter's resistance, is strong presumptive evidence that the iron-clads are working heavy damage to the fort. We are not without strong conviction that if ten of our iron-clad ships could meet without casualty to themselves the fire of Forts Moultrie and Sumter and Morris Island for a full half a day, as we have it by rebel authority, they will prove abundantly able to stand it for a week, if necessary, and until they batter Sumter to a level with its foundations, and burn Charleston to the ground.

There can be but one universal feeling in the North, that the fire of war has surged around to the right place, at last. The avenging guns of the Union have at length pierced that black sea of disunion and guilt—Charleston harbor—and are pouring their fiercest fires upon the rebels in Forts Sumter and Moultrie. It may be that this, the second anniversary of the day in which the Union flag fell from the walls of Sumter, sees that flag waving over Sumter's ruins.

The Mississippi.—We stated yesterday morning that we now controlled the whole length of the Mississippi River, so far as its navigation by the rebels was concerned. An evening journal objects to this, so far as relates to the space of 200 miles between Vicksburgh and Port Hudson. It says that we have only three vessels there, and that these can do very little to prevent the rebels from crossing with bodies of soldiers, supplies of cattle, mails, etc. We do not think, as we expressly stated, that our fleet will be able to cut off entirely the mail communication between the east and west banks of the river; but still we control it pretty effectually so far as all other intercourse is concerned. The rebels would need steamers and transports to bring across bodies of troops and supplies of cattle, and they have none at liberty in that part of the Mississippi referred to. Beside, the only navigable stream entering the Mississippi between Port Hudson and Vicksburgh, by which supplies could be brought down from Texas, is Red River, and we have news this morning that Farragut's fleet of two vessels and Ellet's ram have again swept down to that region, and have doubtless cleared the river of any craft that may have tried to creep out from any hiding-place, as the fleet cleared it a few weeks ago, on going up. It is impossible for the rebels to navigate a single league of the great Mississippi.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

Washington, Friday, April 10.

OPERATIONS UP THE WARE RIVER.

Commander Gillis, of the gunboat Commodore Morris, has done some necessary work up the Ware River, a tributary of the York. A venomous rebel, named Patterson Smith, having 20,000 bushels of corn which he was bargaining to the rebel Government at Richmond, was visited by Gillis, and furnished with an opportunity of showing that he was as base a liar as traitor, in reply to questions put to him. The result was that Smith paid Gen. Keyes a visit of compulsion, and all the corn on his plantation, excepting 1,500 bushels saved for his family and negroes, together with two thousand bushels of wheat, were burned. Gillis used a force of one hundred men in this work, and had to fight a large body of rebel cavalry. He used shells in dispersing them, and the bursting of his shells played havoc with the rebels. The plantation of another rebel, named Bird, was also visited by Gillis, and one thousand bushels of wheat and three thousand bushels of corn consumed—the whole under interruption of rebel cavalry and continuous fighting.

A REBEL REPORT.

A Chattanooga telegram in the Richmond Dispatch of April 7 says: "Bob Johnson, son of Andrew Johnson, is reported captured by our cavalry at Triune.'

THE REBELS AT RICHMOND.

Those economists who conquer the rebels by advertising them as abandoning their strongholds, will please take notice that in the published proceedings of the rebel Senate of April 6, a bill appears to have been introduced to purchase a site for a magazine and a laboratory near Richmond.

A SWISS OFFICER ARRIVED.

The Swiss Government has lately sent one of its Colonels here to study our civil war. He will go soon through our camps, and then will travel South through all the rebel armies, from the Rappahannock to the Gulf.

EXEMPTION FROM DISABILITY.

Medical Inspector Coolidge, Surgeon Brenton and Assistant Surgeon Barthold have been detailed to establish rules and define degrees of disability upon which persons falling under the operation of the Conscription law can be exempted. The decision of the Board will be conclusive with the Provost-Marshals and Examining Surgeons throughout the country.

CLAIMS FOR TOLLS.

The Secretary of War has decided that the claims of turnpike and bridge companies for tolls on Government account, shall be settled by paying fifty per cent of the amount of legal tolls, and these must be proved by satisfactory evidence. In settling such accounts, the disbursing officers of the Quartermaster's Department must be governed by this decision.

EXAMINING SURGEONS.

Commissioner Barrett to-day appointed the following Examining Surgeons: Joseph H. May, Kankakee, Ill.; Thos. Hall, Fonton, Ill.

PAY OF CONTRACT NURSES.

Surgeon-General Hammond has reduced the pay of the contract nurses in the hospitals to $13 per month and rations, with an allowance of $3 per month for clothing.

GEN. HARTSUFF.

Gen. Hartsuff will leave for his command under Gen. Burnside, on Monday.

SIGNAL OFFICERS.

By order of the Secretary of War, authority is given to retain in the service officers and men now on signal duty, whose term of service will expire before they can be examined by a Board to be appointed for that purpose, under the act of March 3, 1863, conditioned on good conduct and qualifications.

D'UTASSY.

The Court-martial in D'Utassy's case adjourned to Tuesday, to give him time to prepare his defence. The charges and specifications have been somewhat modified.

ARREST OF A CONTRABANDIST.

Isaac Hamon, a Jewish contrabandist, was arrested to-day, while attempting to cross one of the bridges leading into Maryland. Upon being searched $2,250, in Southern bank notes, and $56 in specie were found concealed in a belt around his person. It is supposed that he was on his return from Richmond for another lot of goods. He was sent to the Old Capitol Prison.

DEATHS OF SOLDIERS.

The following are among the deaths reported to-day:

Shipman Griffin, 122d New-York.
S. Swift, 143d New-York.
James Duffey, 118th New-York.
W. Spencer, 4th New-York artillery.
E. K. Lee, 20th Connecticut.

Companies authorized by charter to build railroads or canals, upon which passengers and freight other than that of the Company are to be transported, being indebted for any sum or sums of money for which bonds or other evidences of indebtedness have been, or shall be issued, payable in one or more years after date, are required to withhold three per centum from all payments on account of coupons or interest upon such indebtedness as was incurred on account of such railroad or canal, and to make quarterly returns and payment thereof to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

REVENUE STAMPS.

The following new varieties of internal revenue stamps have been prepared, and orders for them can be filled immediately: Foreign exchange $1 30, $1 60 and $1 90; inland exchange, $2 50 and $3 50; mortgage $25. No new stamps of small denominations have been issued for promissory notes since the change in the rates made by the act of March 3. In all cases of willful neglect to use stamps, proceedings will be commenced by the collectors for the recovery of the penalties provided in the Excise law.

RECRUITS IN IRELAND.

It has been ascertained from an official source that no person has been authorized to obtain recruits in Ireland, as alleged by the Liverpool Albion.

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.

Count Castiglioni, who holds a high position under Victor Emanuel's Government, is now visiting Washington. He has been the recipient of distinguished attentions.

Amusements.

The third performance of "Ione" last evening was not only superb in itself, but so far above the average of operatic performances in America, that we are disposed to regard it as one of the finest ever listened to in the Academy. To say that it created a furore, is to convey but a slight idea of the real pleasure that was manifested by the audience, which we may here add, crowded every part of the building. It is now that this work is beginning to be recognized as one of the best of the modern Italian repertoire, and it is now, certainly, that it is heard to best advantage. Artists, orchestra and chorus were alike excellent, and in the splendid finale of the third act, vied with each other to produce a result that was really astonishing. The principals were called out three times after this piece.

To-day there will be a grand Matinée, when "Lucia" will be played, and a scena from "Il Puritani."

The German Opera Company, funder Mr. Carl Anschütz, will also give a representation of "Martha" in the evening.

Brooklyn Academy of Music.—The sale of tickets for next week's German Opera, commences here to-day.

Laura Keene's Theatre.—The performances at this establishment to-night are for the benefit of Mr. Thomas Baker, the popular and able conductor of the orchestra, and a musician who succeeds more than any other in providing the precise kind of orchestral extracts that the public requires and relishes. It is, we believe, the first time Mr. Baker has appealed to the public, and this circumstance, added to what we have already stated, ought, we think, to insure a full attendance. Moreover, on this occasion Miss Rose Eytinge, whose success on Wednesday last in Miss Keene's rôle of Nellie O'Donohue was so marked, will make her last appearance in that character. The lady, so far, has been seen under circumstances that were, from their suddenness—if from no other cause—unfavorable to the ease of the artist. Placed suddenly in a character that had been impersonated by Miss Keene, and which even that remarkable artist could not make powerful, it is certainly high praise to say that Miss Eytinge infused into it a quiet, graceful and earnest interest that gave abundant evidence of her delicate and unusual powers. The lady's freedom from affectation of speech and exaggeration of action, without detracting from the force that is required, are so marked that we are sure in a higher range of play, where jigs and brogues are alike unknown, she will win and merit a career before a metropolitan audience. It is a fortunate thing that her début, although hurried, was made under the auspices of Miss LAURA KEENE, who will, as an artist of the undemonstrative school herself, appreciate Miss ETTINGE's ability, and give to her, we hope, the proper opportunities for displaying it.

Irish Relief Committee.

PETERBORO, April 6, 1863.

Hon. CHARLES P. DALY:—Dear Sir: Not until this hour did I see the appeal in behalf of the suffering Irish, subscribed by yourself and others. Please hand your Treasurer the inclosed draft for $1,000.

Very respectfully, your friend,
GERRIT SMITH.

Carleton's Publications.

CARLETON, the popular New-York publisher, has a number of very striking new books in press, among which may be mentioned a novel entitled Frank Warrington, by the author of Rutledge and The Sutherlands. My Southern Friends, by EDMUND KIRK, author of Among the Pines. Marian Gray, a novel from the pen that gave us Lena Rivers. STEPHEN MASSETT's autobiography, Drifting About, illustrated by MULLEN; and Vincenzo, by RUFFINI, author of Doctor Antonio. The success of several of CARLETON's later publications is worthy of notice. Among the Pines has reached the enormous sale of 35,000 copies. The public has patronized Artemus Ward to the extent of nearly 15,000 copies of his comicalities; and has taken 120,000 volumes of Les Misérables. The Great Consummation, the sequel to The Great Tribulation, by Dr. CUMMINGS, has also had an extensive circulation in this country and Canada; while Rutledge and The Sutherlands have reached their thirtieth thousand. In the way of poetry, Mr. CARLETON has made two successful ventures, in The King's Bell, by R. H. STODDARD, and in Aldrich's Poems, in blue and gold, two large editions of which have already been disposed of.—Tribune.

DEAFNESS
NOISES IN THE HEAD,
Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat,
CATARRH CURED
BY
DR. VON EISENBERG.

From the Journal of Commerce.

EXCITING NEWS FOR THE DEAF.—An instrument called Dr. Von Eisenberg's Air Passage Expander and Regulator, a gigantic machine, weighing nearly five hundred pounds, about five feet in height, a most wonderful apparatus for restoring sight and hearing, has just arrived for Dr. Von Eisenberg, the celebrated Oculist and Aurist, and will be on exhibition at the Doctor's office, No. 816 Broadway, for a few days previous to its use. The instrument is constructed decidedly on the most scientific principles. To give a detailed description would require a greater space than we can now spare. Our Oculist and Aurist seems to do everything in the line of his profession on a gigantic scale. The new instrument for restoring hearing to the deaf and sight to the blind is so constructed that it cannot fail to open the most obstructed air passages. His new consulting rooms, No. 816 Broadway, are correspondingly magnificent, and his practice as Aurist and Oculist large and eminently successful.

From the New-York Evening Express, Feb. 14, 1863.

SENSATION AMONG THE DEAF.—The unrivaled skill of Dr. Von Eisenberg, the far-famed Oculist and Aurist, of No. 816 Broadway, has made quite a sensation among the Deaf and Blind by his wonderful cures, which attract the Deaf, Blind and those suffering from Chronic Catarrh, from all parts of the Union to his office. The number of his certificates of really wonderful cures swells daily. For the benefit of sufferers, we submit the following, which requires no comment:

NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain. JOHN TAYLOR,
No. 13 Livingston-st., Brooklyn.

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1862

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.
CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

No. 188 MERCER-ST., NEW-YORK.

J. E. VON EISENBERG, M. D.—Dear Doctor: I have been afflicted with total deafness, and was induced to pay you a visit. No one can imagine my delight when, after one operation, my hearing was suddenly, and without pain, restored to me, for which I feel very grateful. After being totally deaf—almost shut out from the pleasure of using so necessary a sense—to have it returned, and to hear so distinctly, reflects great credit on you for the immense amount of skill you possess. I beg to thank you for what I can so truly appreciate. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, EDWARD TEMPLE HARRISON.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 6, 1862.

DR. VON EISENBERG—Dear Sir: Before taking leave of you, after your most successful operation on my ear, allow me to express my sincere thanks that, by your scientific surgical performance, I am enabled to hear distinctly, and enjoy a pleasure of which I have long been deprived—over a year. May you be rewarded by being enabled to perform many similar, to benefit other sufferers, and to your own emolument.
Allow me to present my kindest regards, and assure you of my grateful remembrance. Respectfully,
A. MCDONALD REYNOLDS,
Captain Marines, United States.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ
NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

LIVER COMPLAINT AND DYSPEPSIA.

It is estimated that seven-tenths of all adult ailments proceed from a diseased and torpid liver. The billary secretions of the liver overflowing into the stomach poison the entire system and exhibit the above symptoms.

After long research, we are able to present the most remarkable cure for these horrid nightmare diseases the world has ever produced. Within one year, over six hundred and forty thousand persons have taken the Plantation Bitters, and not an instance of complaint has come to our knowledge!

It is a most effectual tonic and agreeable stimulant, suited to all conditions of life.

The reports that it relies upon mineral substances for its active properties, are wholly false. For the public satisfaction, and that patients may consult their physicians, we append a list of its components.

CALISAYA BARK—Celebrated for over two hundred years in the treatment of Fever and Ague, Dyspepsia, Weakness, &c. It was introduced into Europe by the Countess, wife of the Viceroy of Peru, in 1640, and afterwards sold by the Jesuits for the enormous price of its own weight in silver, under the name of Jesuit's Powders, and was finally made public by Louis XVI., King of France. Humboldt makes especial reference to its febrifuge qualities during his South American travels.

CASCARILLA BARK—For diarrhea, colic and disease of the stomach and bowels.

DANDELION—For inflammation of the loins and dropsical affections.

CAMOMILE FLOWERS—For enfeebled digestion.

LAVENDER FLOWERS—Aromatic, stimulant and tonic—highly invigorating in nervous debility.

WINTER-GREEN—For scrofula, rheumatism, &c.

ANISE—An aromatic carminative; creating flesh, muscle and milk; much used by mothers nursing.

Also, clove-buds, orange, carraway, coriander, snake-root, &c.

Another wonderful ingredient, of Spanish origin, imparting beauty to the complexion and brilliancy to the mind, is yet unknown to the commerce of the world, and we withhold its name for the present.

IMPORTANT CERTIFICATES.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1861.

Messrs. P. H. DRAKE & Co.: I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia for three or four years, and had to abandon my profession. I am respectfully yours, Rev. J. S. CATHORN.

CAPILLARY DISEASES.

DR. B. C. PERRY,
THE CELEBRATED DERMATOLOGIST,
From No. 29 Winter-st., Boston,
And the only man in this country who has ever made the treatment of
DISEASED SCALPS,
LOSS OF HAIR, and BLANCHING,
a specialty, has established himself at
NO. 49 BOND-ST., NEW-YORK, where he can be consulted by all who are afflicted with any disease of the scalp, loss of hair, or premature blanching.

Dr. Perry is prepared to treat successfully the following diseases, all of which are productive of a loss of hair:

Debilitation of the External Skin, Suppressed Secretion, Irritation of the Scalp, Dandruff or Thickened Secretion, Inflammation of the Sensitive Skin, Matterated Secretion, Hair Eater, Distended or Swollen Roots, and Premature Blanching.

This is the only method based upon Physiological principles which has ever been presented to the public for the restoration of the Hair.

Particular attention is called to the Doctor's theory of treating DISEASED SCALPS AND RESTORING HAIR.

It no doubt will commend itself to every intelligent and reflecting mind.

There are eighteen Diseases of the Head and Scalp that cause a loss of hair, and in some instances premature blanching, each requiring in its treatment different remedies. Where loss of hair has resulted from any of those diseases, the first thing to be done is to remove the disease by a proper course of treatment; restore the scalp to its normal condition; keep the pores open, so that the secretion can pass off, and in every follicle that is open new strands of hair will make their appearance.

The philosophy of premature blanching is this: Iron and Oxygen are the principal constituents of dark hair; Lime and Magnesia of light hair. When the suppressed secretions between the skins contain an excess of lime, it is taken up by the strands, causing the hair to turn white; by opening the pores, the accumulation of lime passes off with the secretions, the natural components of the hair resume their ascendancy, and the hair resumes its natural color.

Because persons have tried various preparations for the hair, and have been deceived by them, and in some cases their difficulty made worse by their use, they need not be discouraged. The one preparation system for any class of diseases must necessarily prove a failure. No one compound can be available for a dozen or more diseases; it may remove some difficulties, in other cases useless, and in some positively injurious.

Dr. Perry's method is in accordance with the law of cause and effect. He makes a personal examination, ascertains what disease of the scalp has or is producing a loss of hair or premature whitening, prescribes such remedies, according to its nature and requirements, as will remove the disease; hence his success in treating
CAPILLARY DISEASES.

As to Dr. Perry's ability and success in treating diseases of the Scalp, Loss of Hair, and Premature Blanching, he has in his possession the most reliable testimonials from Physicians, Clergymen and others, in every city where he has practiced. They can be seen by calling at his office, No. 49 Bond-st.

LABOULAYE'S GREAT WORK, VIZ:
PARIS IN AMERICA,
Translation by Miss MARY L. BOOTH. 1 vol. 12mo.
From the Paris Correspondent of N. Y. Tribune.
A very ingenious, humorous, pungent satire on the faults and defects of French manners and customs, under the restrictive influence of French administrative custom, as compared with the free and easy, self-developing independence of American manners and customs. There is a grave, thoughtful censor's visage under the extravagant, laughing mask. Nay, looked at closely, here is satire not only of French national defects, but of American foibles. It is a singularly clever book.
By "Malakoff," Paris Correspondent N. Y. Times.
It is a sarcastic, witty and philosophic criticism on French political and social life, as compared to that of the United States, and deals such hard blows at certain high dignitaries in France, that one is astonished at not seeing the book seized by the police. It is an important and most entertaining book.

AGENCY OF THE
NATIONAL (FIVE-TWENTY YEAR) LOAN.

OFFICE OF LIVERMORE, CLÉAS & CO.,
No. 31 Wall-st., New-York.

We take this means of answering the numerous inquiries made of us respecting the United States Five-Twenty Loan, for which we act as agents.

Said Bonds bear six per cent. interest, payable semi-annually, in gold, on the first of May and the first of November.

Have twenty years to run, but being redeemable at the pleasure of the Government after five years, are designated Five-Twenties.

Are issued both in Coupon and Registered Bonds; the former in denominations of 50's, 100's, 500's, 1,000's; the latter in 500's, 1,000's, 5,000's and 10,000's.

The Coupon Bonds have coupons attached for twenty years, and are payable transferable to bearer.

The Registered are issued in the name of the purchaser, (whose name and residence are recorded on the books of the Treasury Department at Washington,) and are only transferable by signature, or power of Attorney, before an authorized Government official. The interest is collected in the same manner at the Sub-Treasury nearest the owner's residence.

Both principal and interest are payable in gold, as provided by act of Congress.

Are (in common with all Government Bonds) free from taxation by city, town, county or State; and the income derived therefrom is subject only to one-half of the United States tax levied upon incomes derived from other sources.

The privilege of conversion at par will cease on the 1st of July, 1865.

These Bonds are supplied by us at par and accrued interest in currency—interest commencing to the purchaser upon deposit of the money. Hence, the first coupon falls due, being stamped with the date of the issue of the Bond, will be fractional, instead of three per cent., like the succeeding ones.

We shall shortly be prepared to deliver all the various denominations upon application.

The engravers and printers have been unable to furnish blank bonds to the extent required, but every effort is being made to meet the demand, and it is expected that with the increased force now employed upon them, there will be less delay hereafter.

Orders, by mail or otherwise, accompanied by draft on New-York, or current funds, will be promptly responded to.

CAUTION TO LADIES.

Madame RESTELL, Female Physician, No. 162 Chambers-street, deems it her duty to caution ladies against impostors, who appropriate her advertisements, word for word, merely substituting some ignorant and wholly irresponsible person as "Madame."

These persons have spurious "Female Monthly Pills" and other poisonous compounds to deprive the unwary or the easily duped, as well of their means as of their health.

That ladies may avoid these impositions, Madame Restell feels called upon to give this caution.

SURE CURE—BY DR. POWERS, SUCCESSfully consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 12 Laight-st. Conducted on the plan of the Hospital des Veneriens, Paris, where those afflicted with any form of private disease can receive prompt treatment, without risk or exposure, viz.: Syphilis, gonorrhœa, gleet, strictures, ulcers, tumors, cancer, secondary and constitutional syphilis, diseases of the kidneys, &c., &c. Thirty years of extensive practice, exclusively devoted to the treatment of these complaints enable us to effect cures in cases where others of less experience have failed. Dr. Powers' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. This marvelous agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitutions—physical disqualifications, impediments to marriage, thereby speedily cured. The men to consult, Drs. Ward and Powers, the champions and kings of venereal diseases, possessing the most certain, speedy and only effectual remedies in the world, guarantee a perfect cure, or no charge, in from one to three days. Established in 1840. N. B.—Those who have used their preventives are never without. Send for a circular. To Ladies.—Dr. Powers' Periodical Drops are a safe and certain remedy for monthly irregularities. The above remedies sent by mail. The afflicted should read their circular. Postage free, on receipt of a stamp. Cures warranted.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by DR. WARD & CO., No. 12 Laight-st., near Canal, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 28 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call, I will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much-neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from Impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance, failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to DR. WARD, No. 12 Laight-st., the only place. Call, send or write.

MADAME RESTELL, FEMALE PHYSICIAN can be consulted, as usual, at No. 162 Chambers-st., or by letter, and medicine sent by mail. Her FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS are the only medicine married or single ladies can rely upon with safety and certainty. Price $1 a box. All other "Female Monthly Pills" are counterfeit.

N. B.—Ladies who desire to avail themselves of Madame RESTELL'S valuable, certain and safe mode of removing obstructions, suppressions, &c., &c., from whatever cause, without the use of medicine or instruments, can do so at one interview.

Prepared and sold by Dr. POWERS, No. 12 Laight-st., New-York. Afflicted, try them! They will certainly cure. Send for circular; read it carefully, and then you will send for the remedies.

DR. VAN SPELT'S INDIAN MAGIC PILLS —Guaranteed to cure all secret diseases in four days. Only $1 per box. His liquid preservative, to act as preventive, is recommended by the faculty. $1 per bottle. Consultations daily in his office, No. 319½ Broadway, from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., and 4 to 8 P. M.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. That is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 200 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

Alderman CHAS. J. CHIPP,

HON. EDWARD EVERETT ON THE WAR.

Address Before the Boston Union Club on Thursday, April 9.

Hon. EDWARD EVERETT delivered an oration before the Union Club, of Boston, of which he has been chosen President, at its first meeting, on Thursday last. It is one of this great orator's greatest productions; and its magnificent rhetoric, impregnable logic and lofty patriotism, entitle it to rank with the masterpieces of the first great master of oratorical and patriotic eloquence. The oration is of great length, and the exigencies of space compel us to omit his argument overthrowing the postulates of the rebel chiefs, as well as those parts bearing upon the history of the Crittenden Compromise, and the necessity of unity in support of the Administration. But some passages are so appropriate to this day and hour, and to the proposed Union demonstration, that we cannot refrain from quoting them. After a few introductory words in reference to the Union Club, he opened:

"The struggle in which the Government and loyal people of the country have been now for nearly two years engaged, is one, I need scarce say, of almost unexampled magnitude, attended with all the difficulties, the sacrifices, the alternations of success and failure, which are incident to a contest of such stupendous dimensions. Scarce ever have there been arrayed against each other, on a field of action so vast, forces so numerous, at an expense so great, with such profusion of material supplies and financial resources, and, what is infinitely more important, with interests so momentous at stake. The scene of the conflict, coextensive as it is with the settlements of the United States this side of the Rocky Mountains, is but little inferior in extent to Europe; the military forces in array, and amply supplied with the materiel of war, are as great as were ever placed in the field in the wars of the French Revolution; the sea coast held in rigid blockade by our navy is more extensive than that actually blockaded by the navy of Great Britain, during that war; our armies and navy, owing to the character of our soldiers and seamen, and the higher standard of comfort in this country, are sustained at greater expense than those of any other service, and the objects of the war are nothing less than to prevent a great and prosperous Union of states, under one Constitutional Government, from being broken up into wretched fragments; to protect the organic life of a mighty people, in the morning of their national existence, from the murderous and suicidal blow aimed at it; to rescue the work of our revolutionary and constitutional fathers, the greatest political work of human wisdom, from ignominious ruin, and to hand down this peerless inheritance of public and private blessings unimpaired to our posterity.

Compared with these objects, now insignificant the scene, the operations, the objects of the recent wars in Europe, and how unimportant their results! The late Italian war had for its object, nominally to drive the foreigner beyond the Alps and to give Italy to the Italians, while its real object was to restore the military and political influence of France in Europe, and at least as far as Italy is concerned, annul the treaties of Vienna. But all Italy is not equal in extent to New-York, Pennsylvania and Ohio; the Austrians still hold Venice and the best half of the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom; France is still intrenched at Rome, the very heart of the Peninsula, and the exiled dynasties are awaiting the next turn of the wheel of political fortune, for those revolutions in Empire which shall restore them to their former capitals.

The next preceding war had its ostensible origin in the struggles of the Greek and Latin Churches for ascendency in the East; its real object was to check the progress of Russia in that quarter—it arrayed a half a million of men for the destruction or defence of one fortress in the Crimea. The Até of that contest came hot from hell, and let slip the dogs of war, to settle the question whether the French or Russian Vice-Consul should keep the key of the church built upon the spot where the Prince of Peace was born. The war was fought, a hundred thousand families were clad in mourning—Russia still holds the Crimea, Sebastopol has risen from its ruins, and which Vice-Consul keeps the key of the Church of Bethlehem, few persons in Christendom outside of the three Cabinets know or care

And then the great war of the French Revolution, which began with the invasion of France by the Prussians in 1792, and ended with the exile of NAPOLEON to St. Helena in 1815, which, more than any contest in modern times, resembles, in the vastness of its theatre and the magnitude of the forces arrayed, the contest in which we are now involved, now how insignificant its issues compared with those here at stake! The Allies under the lead of England waged war to check the progress of the French Republic, and eventually to restore the Bourbons. The Bourbons are still in exile; the French Revolution is enthroned at the Tuileries, and many of its political maxims have passed into the public law of Europe. The French, on their side, strove to overturn the remains of feudalism in Europe, to destroy the political influence and the maritime ascendency of England, and to subordinate the continental Governments to France. Fierce battles with various fortunes were fought, millions of lives sacrificed, a great deal of old parchment was torn up, a great deal of new parchment written over, and, at the end of twenty-one years, England has come out of the contest stronger than ever; the equilibrium of Europe is substantially unchanged; the relations of the continental Powers to France not materially affected, and the great leaders of the Titanic struggle, France and England, united, seemingly at least, in a most beautiful entente cordiale. A few territorial and dynastic changes of no vital importance to the sum total have been made in Central Europe: a few German electors and Archdukes are styled Kings; Holland and Belgium have been raised to independent monarchies; Genoa has become a Sardinian city, and Venice has become an Austrian city; the nephew of NAPOLEON and the niece of GEORGE IV exchange friendly visits in their respective capitals, and the territorial and political map of Europe is substantially what it was when the assembly of the Notables met at Versailles in 1789.

In that year the Federal Constitution went into operation in the United States; the great political consummation of the design of Providence in the discovery and settlement of America; the happy framework of some of the wisest and best men that ever lived intended to effect the extension of civilization in the shortest possible time, over a vast continent lying in a state of nature; to provide a city of refuge for the starving millions of Europe; to prepare the way for the civilization and christianization of Africa by the return of a portion of her children from the house of bondage, and to combine upon a scale of unprecedented magnitude, the home-bred and fireside blessing of small States and local administrations with the security, influence and power of a great empire. For seventy years it has been working out these great results; it has conferred upon the rapidly increasing population of the country a degree of general prosperity never equaled; it has welcomed the surplus and suffering multitudes of Europe to the enjoyment of a state of well-being never before vouchsafed by Providence to the same extent to the sons of men; and not without the imperfections and woes, and I am sorry to add, the wrongs, which attend all human things, the incidents neither of republics nor of monarchies, but of our common frail humanity, it has conferred upon more than two generations an amount of good, with an exemption from the sacrifices and trials which have afflicted other States, altogether without a parallel in history.

And now the great question which we have to settle is, shall this mighty aggregate of prosperity perish or shall it endure? Shall this imperial heritage of blessings descend unimpaired to our posterity, or shall it be ignominiously, profligately thrown away? Shall the territory of the Union, late so happy under the control and adjustment of the National and State Governments, be broken up into miserable fragments, sure to be engaged in constantly recurring border wars; and all lying at the mercy of foreign Powers, or shall it preserve its noble integrity under the ægis of the National Government? Admit the right of the seceding States to break up the Union at pleasure, nay of each and every State to do so, and allow them to enforce that right by a successful war;—deny the authority of the Central Government to control its members, and how long will it be before the new Confederacies created by the first disruption shall be resolved into still smaller fragments, and the continent becomes a vast theatre of civil war, military license, anarchy, and depotism? Better, at whatever cost, by whatever sacrifice, settle the question at once, and settle it forever. For remember, my friends, that, in this desolating war, the Government and loyal people of the country are the party assailed, and that they are clad in the triple armor of a just cause. The pretence is set up by the rebels that they are contending for the right of self-government; the unfriendly Press of Europe talks of its being a war of revenge and subjugation. Consider what makes a just war even in the opinion of those who condemn the North. England, a little more than a twelvemonth ago, thought it a just cause of war, that a merchant-packet was brought to at sea by a belligerent cruiser, in the exercise of the undoubted right of search, and that four persons were taken from it, as she considered, without warrant in the law of nations, though she in the last general war had taken more than 4,000 persons from our neutral vessels, equally without warrant in the law of nations. The Federal Government, in the paralysis of its powers caused by the Interregnum between the old and new Administrations, submitted with patience to the affront of having two ships laden with supplies for a fort belonging to the United States, fired upon in profound peace, by a pretended Government unacknowledged at that time, even as a belligerent, by any foreign Power. It was not till the third act of open organized war, as mean as it was murderous—the assault on Fort Sumter from eleven batteries manned by eight or ten thousand men—a fortress belonging to the United States, built by the General Government, upon a spot ceded by the State of South Carolina to the United States and then occupied by one company of seventy men, provisioned but for forty-eight hours; not till the threat had gone forth, on the same day, from the capital of the pretended Confederacy, that in three weeks their flag should float over the dome of the Capitol at Washington, and in due time over Faneuil Hall; not till their emissaries in London had claimed that Mr. Adams, the Envoy of the United States, ought not to be received on his arrival, because before that event, the Confederacy would be installed at Washington, and the United States would have ceased to exist; it was not till all this had taken place, that the General Government drew the sword.

* * * * * *

In an Italian church-yard there is a monument with an epitaph on a man, who being well, dosed himself to death with unwholesome drugs. Stovo bene, ma, per star meglio, sto qui. 'I was well, I wanted to be better; and here I am.' Mr. DAVIS was living about two years ago, as he tells us, under the best form of Government ever instituted by man; no mean blessing that to begin with as the world goes. There was no fault to be found with the manner in which it had been administered. Of how few governments can that be said, in ancient or modern times.

Was not this enough for man or people? Alas, no! Mr. DAVIS was not content with this exuberant felicity. He needed something more; he desired a 'nice and subtle happiness;' he sighed for 'Fraternity.' To get that precious boon, he dosed himself with the maddening drug of secession; and now behold him; the fetlocks of his war-horse wet with the blood of civil war, oozing from the trampled bosoms of friend and of foe, as he rages over the field of death in search of something better than the best of Governments; than an unexceptionable Administration; than a prosperity without example in the history of the world!

Is this patriotic statesmanship or is it ambitious frenzy? What! an unprincipled rebellion like this to be compared with the work of our sainted Fathers, of WASHINGTON and FRANKLIN, and JEFFERSON and ADAMS, the heroes and sages of the Revolution! This gigantic treason to be profanely lauded as the august foundation of a new State; to be fed with foreign gold and nursed with foreign favor! Then let all pretence of distinction between right and wrong, truth and falsehood be abandoned. Lift up your heads, ye prison gates, and let your wronged inmates go free! Come home from the cannibal islands, ye missionaries, and let the honest savage gorge upon his 'strange flesh.' Throw open your doors, O just Bedlam, and send your abused philosophers, princes and statesmen to their homes! Cease your dull prates, ye teachers of morals! There is no crime, there is no barbarism, there is no madness. Those who make constitutions, not those who break them, shall henceforward be the traitors. Our legislators and judges shall be the culprits, not felons and thieves. Oaths shall no longer be the link, that binds the soul of the creature to the footstool of the Creator, but a base trap baited by knaves to catch the easy consciences of fools; and all this vaunted civilization, founded on institutions, hallowed by religion, buttressed by tribunals, accepted by the common sense of mankind, shall be proclaimed, in the face of the universe, a paltry show and a wicked lie!

Well did Mr. Vice-President STEPHENS observe, on the 14th of November, 1860, that "the disappointment of ambitious aspirants to office had had much to do with bringing on the deplorable state of affairs."

Such is his declaration, and if this assertion of the second officer in the Confederacy is well founded; if this tremendous war has indeed in no small degree been brought upon us for the reason stated by him; if the country has been called to stagger beneath this daily increasing mountain load of debt; if our lawful commerce has been surrendered to the rovers of the sea, fitted out with shameless cupidity to prey upon it; if the influence of our country, which so lately held high its head in the front rank of the family of nations, has for the time being been annihilated, and foreign Powers are already insulting us with coldness and indifference, watching and awaiting to see the noble Ship of State go to pieces on the breakers; if the bones of hundreds and thousands of our brethern are bleaching on the battlefield; if other hundreds and other thousands are languishing with cruel wounds and the diseases of the camp, mutilated, broken down, prematurely old, creeping from the wards of the hospital to their last bed in the churchyard; if the flower of our young men North and South has been cut down; if the bereaved and desolate parent, the heart-broken widow, the mourning sister, the orphan child, have been called to swell this frightful sum of human calamity; if all these numberless and nameless woes have been brought upon the land, because Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS was not nominated by Mr. JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE chosen President, then, so sure as Heaven is just, the tears of the bereaved, the pangs of the wounded, the agonies of the dying will lie heavy on the souls of the authors of these crimes and woes; their memories will go down to the execration of the latest posterity; and their names stand recorded on the page of history by the side of the Benedict Arnolds, the Catilines, the Judas Iscariots of modern and of ancient times!

On the grim and bloody catalogue, which history unrolls to teach and warn us, we read of the merciless wars of the Assyrians and Chaldeans, of the Medes and Persians, which desolated the fairest regions of the earth in the morning of the world; of the disastrous conflicts of the Confederate States of Greece, in which their short-lived prosperity was blasted, their cities razed, their fighting men massacred by thousands, their women and children sold into Slavery—prototype as far as the laws of modern warfare permit of the ruin which awaits our Union if the poison of secession is admitted into the veins of the body politic; of the steadily growing ferocity and the murderous struggles of party in the Roman Republic, passing through the bloody gates of proscription and civil war to the dreary calm of a merciless despotism, at whose abominations human nature stands aghast. We read of the secular wars of the Italian Republics, of the factions which rent the vitals of England for generations, of the wars of the Reformation, of the thirty years' war in Germany, of the wars of Louis XIV. and the Spanish succession, of the constantly renewed struggle for the balance of power in Europe, and finally of the gigantic wars of the French Revolution; but I defy any one to produce in all these bloody pages the record of a war undertaken to overthrow a Government admitted to be by those who levy it, the most perfect, the best administered, the most productive of prosperity which the world has seen. That madness was reserved for the annals of this rebellion; and I do not scruple to say that, from the dawn of history to the present time, there is not on record a war so unprovoked, so causeless, so unprincipled, so pregnant with bootless suffering to all concerned, so destructive of good, so fertile of crime and woe, as the war now waged by the oligarchy of the South, for the purpose of breaking up this mild and beneficent Government.

"My friends, there is no alternative but to acknowledge the independence of the Confederacy, or to subdue the rebellion by the strong arm of military power. To suppose that there is hopes of any other settlement is the grossest delusion.

Can you then recognize the independence of the Confederacy? Remember that it carries with it acknowledged defeat, in a war of aggressin, arrogantly provoked, by an enemy notoriously inferior in numbers, financial means and all the resources of war; that a peace made on that basis would be a standing invitation, not only to foreign Powers, in all our disputes, but to an insolent antagonist, flushed with triumph, to resort, on every future occasion of controversy between the two Governments to menace, insult and invasion.

We are expected to give up to a foreign Power, (and a bitterly hostile foreign Power it will be,) and that under the coercion of a barbarous war waged upon a wretched metaphysical quibble, half this fair territory of the United States; a seacoast of two thousand miles; some of the best harbors and military stations of the country; the fortresses that guard our coastwise commerce; some of the great lines of communication East and West, North and South; the control of the navigation of the Gulf of Mexico, and of the outlet of that great system of internal waters which gives its character to the central basin of the Continent; to give it up too on a principle, in virtue of which each and every one of the seceding States may fall into the arms of any European Power that chooses to persuade or coerce the surrender. To suppose such a thing possible on the part of the United States, except at the last spasm of national strength, the last sigh of national honor, the last struggle of national agony, would be to apply to the whole country Judge PETIGRU's conception of the State of Soute Carolina.

Can any man look at a map of the Union and then seriously entertain the opinion that the United States, brought to the very verge of a war with Great Britain, after a diplomatic struggle of sixty years for the possession of a few acres of unsettled land on the banks of the Aroostook, are going to permit a foreign power to intrench itself at the entrance of Chesapeake Bay, and thence to stretch its boundary westwardly, wherever it chooses to draw the lines—over the hills, through the central plains, across the Rocky Mountains, to the setting sun?

* * * * * * * * * * *

But it is time to draw this discussion to a close. War is justly regarded as one of the greatest evils that can befal a nation, though it is not the greatest, and of this great evil, civil war is the most deplorable form. Thus far, it is true, we have the satisfaction of reflecting, notwithstanding the barbarities inflicted upon Union men in the seceding States, that the contest has been carried on without the atrocities which have been too apt, in all ages and countries, to mark the progress of civil war. Still it is a dire calamity. I want words to express the sorrow with which from the first I have contemplated, and unceasingly contemplate, the necessity laid upon us to wage this war for the integrity of the Nation. Few persons, I think, have entertained visions more glowing of the amount of blessings stored up for the latest posterity, in the perpetual Union of the States. I had seen them already expanded from sixteen States and 4,000,000 inhabitants, which were the numbers at the time of my birth, to a family of thirty-four States and a population augmented eight fold; and reason and imagination were alike tasked to find a limit to the natural growth of the country. But numbers and space are but the relation of material things. I saw exemplified in this Western world—long hidden and late revealed—the idea of a form of government as nearly perfect as our frail nature admits; prodigal of blessings to the millions now on the stage; and promising a share in the same rich inheritance to the millions on millions that should follow us. I grew up beneath the shadow of our beautiful flag, and often when I have seen it floating on distant seas, my heart has melted at the thought of the beloved and happy land, whose union was emblazoned on its streaming folds. On a hundred festive and patriotic occasions, my voice has dwelt—would it had been more worthily—on the grateful theme, and my prayer to Heaven has been, that it might be hushed in death, rather than it should be compelled to abandon that joyous strain. Not without deep solicitude, I saw the angry clouds gathering in the horizon North and South; and I devoted the declining years of my life, with a kind of religious consecration, to the attempt to freshen the sacred memories that cluster round that dear and venerated name which I need not repeat; memories which survived the multiplying causes of alienation, and were so well calculated to strengthen the cause of Union. To these humble efforts, and the time and labor expended upon them—truly a labor of love—I would, as Heaven is my witness, have cheerfully added the sacrifice of my life, if by so doing I could have averted the catastrope. For that cause, I should have thought a few careworn and weary years cheaply laid on the altar of my country

But it could not be. A righteous Providence in its wisdom has laid upon us the performance of this great and solemn duty. It is now plain to the dullest perception, that the hour of trial could not be much longer delayed. The leaders of the rebellion tell us themselves that they had plotted and planned it for an entire generation. It might have been postponed for four years or for eight years, but it was sure in no long to come; and it, by base compliance, we could have turned the blow from ourselves, it would have fallen with redoubled violence on our children.

Let us then meet it like men. It must needs be that offences shall come, but wo unto that man by whom the offence cometh. Let us show ourselves equal to the duty imposed upon us, and faithful to the trust to which we are called. The cause in which we are engaged is the cause of the Constitution and the Law, of civilization and freedom, of man and of God. Let us engage in it with a steadiness and fortitude, a courage and a zeal, a patience and a resolution, a hope and a cheer, worthy of the fathers from whom we are descended, of the country we defend, and of the privileges we inherit. There is a call and a duty, a work and a place for all; for man and for woman, for rich and for poor, for old and for young, for the stout-hearted and strong-handed, for all who enjoy and all who deserve to enjoy the priceless blessings at stake. Let the venerable forms of the Pilgrim Fathers; the majestic images of our revolutionary sires, and of the sages that gave us this glorious Union; let the anxious expectation of the friends of liberty abroad, awakened at last to the true cause and the great issues of this contest; let the hardships and perils of our brethren in the field, and the fresh-made graves of the dear ones who have fallen; let every memory of the past and every hope of the future, every thought and every feeling that can nerve the arm, or fire the heart, or elevate and purify the soul of a patriot, rouse and guide and cheer and inspire us, to do, and if need be, to die for our country.

The Sumter Anniversary.

Extensive preparations are made for a successful demonstration at the second anniversary of the attack on Sumter, to-day. Six stands will be erected and eminent speakers are provided for each. The Committee, at 11 o'clock last night, were unable to give our reporter any definite information as to who would speak at any particular stand, but we learn that Maj.-Gen. FREMONT, Gen. SIGEL, Gen. COCHRAN, Gen. BUSTED, Hon. MONTGOMERY BLAIR and Hon. A. J. HAMILTON, besides many of our most esteemed local orators, will be of the number.

The following are fit exponents of the many letters received by the Committee:

LETTER OF HON. WM. H. SEWARD, SECRETARY OF STATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, April 3, 1863.

To James A. Roosevelt, Esq., Secretary, &c., No. 94 Maiden-lane, New-York.

MY DEAR SIR: I regret that I cannot attend the Loyal National League, at their inaugural mass meeting, to be held on the 11th of April, to which you have invited me. But I respectfully urge upon those who shall fortunately be able to be there, vigilance, energy, and, above all things, unanimity and concert. When that excellent patriot, Gov. WRIGHT, of Indiana, told me that he was going to Philadelphia to attend a Union League, and asked what he should say to the League for me, "Tell them," I said, "to put my name down on their roll." He replied: "But there are two Union Leagues there; the one thinks this, and is gotten up under such and such auspices, the other thinks that, and is organized by so-and-so. In which of the two will you be enrolled?" "In both o them," was my reply. We are now at the crisis of a revolutionary contest which involves nothing less than the transcendental question whether this unconquerable and irresistible nation shall suddenly perish through imbecility, after a successful and glorious existence of eighty years, or whether it shall survive a thousand years, diffusing light, liberty and happiness throughout the world. Our armies are moving on with a step firmer than those of the Roman Empire or the French Republic ever maintained. Our fleets have surpassed in achievements those of any previous national power. Our credit is conquering interested avarice at home, and defying interested conspiracies abroad. All that remains now is to lift the national temper to the needful height, and fortify to the point of inflexibility the national resolution, so that we shall agree to tolerate no treason at home, and repel any and every intervention, seduction, or aggression from abroad. In order to do this, let us, in our Leagues, ask each other no questions about the past. Of what importance is it to our country now, whether a patriot citizen has been a Democrat, or a Whig, or Republican, or Conservative, or Radical heretofore? Who can say that he himself has never erred, or that his neighbor was not sometimes wiser than himself on questions of administration that have passed away forever? Let us ask each other no questions about how the nation shall govern itself, or who shall preside in its councils in the great future that looms up before us, enveloped alternately in menacing clouds and in gorgeous sunlight. Let whoever may deserve the distinction, by loyalty and energetic service now, come into place and power when this crisis is passed; and let those who shall have survived it decide for themselves who is most wise and most worthy of their confidence.

Let us save the country: that is labor enough, and it will be glory enough for all of the actors of the present hour. It will eclipse even the greatness of our honored forefathers. It will leave us nothing to fear for our posterity.

I am, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

LETTER FROM GEN. HALLECK, GENERAL-IN-CHIEF OF THE AMERICAN ARMIES.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
WASHINGTON, April 5, 1863.

James A. Roosevelt, Secretary of the League, N. Y.:

SIR: I have received your invitation to attend a mass meeting of the Loyal National League in New-York, on the 11th inst., and I regret that my official duties will prevent me from being present. I, however, fully approve of the object of the meeting, as set forth in your circular.

I think no man who has carefully observed the course of events in the rebel States, since the commencement of this war, can now hope for any other peace than that which is imposed by the bayonet. The loyal States must conquer this rebellion, or it will conquer them. Loyal men of all parties, and of all shades of political opinion, must unite in supporting the Government of our fathers, or consent to see the glory and integrity of this great nation utterly destroyed by rebels and traitors. This rebellion cannot be put down by peaceful measures. Those who pretend to think so are either madmen or traitors in disguise. We must either conquer or submit to terms dictated by the Southern oligarchy. There is no other alternative. The great North and West, with their vastly superior numbers and means, can conquer, if they will act together. If, through factions and dissensions, they fail to do this, they will stand forever disgraced in the opinion of the world, and will transmit that disgrace to their posterity.

We have already made immense progress in this war—a greater progress than was ever before made under similar circumstances. Our armies are still advancing, and, if sustained by the voices of the patriotic millions at home, they will ere long crush the rebellion in the South, and then place their heels upon the heads of sneaking traitors in the North. Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
H. W. HALLECK, General-in-Chief.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT IN A CISTERN—TWO MEN SUFFOCATED AND TWO OTHERS NEARLY KILLED.—A terrible accident occurred at the rear of No. 96 Carll-street, Brooklyn, about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, involving the almost instant death of two men and the serious and perhaps fatal injury of two others. It appears that a laborer named JOHN MCGINNESS was employed to clean out a cesspool on the above premises, and in descending, in order to examine the condition of affairs, was struck senseless by the foul air, and fell to the bottom. The fact was soon made known to the neighbors, and several came to aid the man. JOHN DONNELL, who was the first on the spot, went down for the perpose of rescuing MCGINNESS, but he had descended only a few feet when he, too, was rendered senseless by the foul vapor, and sunk into the filthy mass beneath. Mr. JOHN HEARRY, engaged in cleaning the street at the time, next came to the aid of the unfortunate men, and he, too, met with a similar fate. Mr. SAMUEL SLOCUM, anxious to aid his fellow-men, likewise descended, and, like the rest, sunk to the bottom. A neighbor, named KENNY, having the sad fate of the others for his guidance, procured a rope, and with the aid of a number who by this time crowded the yard, succeeded in bringing up Messrs. HEARRY and SLOCUM. The latter soon revived, and was taken to his home near by; but HEARRY, who appeared to be in a dying condition, was conveyed to the City Hospital. The dead bodies of MCGINNESS and DONNELL were subsequently hauled out. The family of the latter, consisting of wife and four children, reside at No. 94 Carroll-street, and that of the former at No. 192 Hudson-avenue. The cistern, it appears, was not only in a very filthy condition, but to add to the nastiness, the wall of an adjoining privy had broken through, making matters much worse. An inquest was held upon the bodies of deceased by Coroner HEGEMAN, and a verdict was rendered that they came to their death by suffocation.

THE FORSYTH-STREET M. E. CHURCH.—We learn, by the list of ministers appointed at the session of the New-York East Conference, that Rev. JOHN PEGG, Jr., is to occupy the pulpit of the Forsyth-street Methodist Church for another year. If the success which has attended Mr. PEGG's eloquent pulpit efforts during the past year is any criterion to judge by, this spacious down-town church will continue to be well filled by appreciative listeners during the present.

Barnum's will be all alive to-day. Those Indian chiefs and warriors have stirred up our citizens, as they have not been before in years. Everybody is rushing to see them. This is their last day. Come now, or you're too late. They are longing for their green fields and wild forest homes, and must be seen now or not at all. To accommodate all who come, BARNUM gives three splendid dramatic performances, at 1½, 3½ and 7½ o'clock P. M. It will be worth a quarter to see the crowd. First performance least crowded.
